Americans Run Bomb Gantlet Out Of Barcelona

Climax in Spain

INSURGENT troops virtually isolated Barcelona, trapping millions of refugees in the shell-wracked city; little resistance was expected, despite a defiant radio challenge by radical elements. Page 7.

ITALY, reported ready to send additional reinforcements to Spain, called up 60,000 reserves for further training. Page 7.

FRANCE, fearing Barcelona's fall would bring a Mediterranean crisis, rushed preparation of mobilization plans. Page 7.

Refugees Flee

By the United Press.

Aboard U. S. S. Omaha, off Caldetas, Spain, Jan. 25.—American warships, their anti-aircraft guns stripped and manned for action, ran a gantlet of insurgent aerial fire today and took off American refugees and embassy staff members—including seven women and three children—fleeing the Barcelona area.

The U. S. destroyer Badger steamed through a rain of bombs to take off 20 American refugees at Caldetas, the embarkation point for foreign refugees.

One 50 Yards From Launch

Seven insurgent planes dropped 14 bombs, several of which appeared to have been aimed at the U. S. cruiser Omaha's motor launch, tied up at the breakwater for the evacuation of the American refugees.

One bomb landed 50 yards from the launch.

Fifteen minutes later, at 8:30 a. m., five other bombers, protected by five fighting planes, dropped 20 large bombs near foreign war ships. Fifteen of them fell within 50 yards of a French destroyer.

The French cruiser Suffren and three destroyers, the British cruiser Devonshire, the Omaha and the Badger were nearby at the time.

New Diplomatic Refuge

At least a dozen anti-aircraft shells were fired from a French destroyer.

The insurgent bombs destroyed a landing stage in front of the British Embassy, moved to Llavaneras from Barcelona, and blew up an ammunition truck which burned for an hour, blocking a road over which Americans and other foreign refugees were escaping from the

London and Paris Expect European Crisis by March

Copyright, 1939, by the United Press.

London (Thursday), Jan. 26.—British and French official quarters today admitted openly that they considered a Mediterranean "crisis" likely in February or March.

The British cabinet late yesterday held a 3-hour session, discussing the situation in Spain

Despite the reticence of British officialdom, it was understood that the foreign office favors immediate adoption of a stiff line in dealing with Germany and Italy.

The foreign office is expected to encourage the British press to deal sternly with possible German and Italian demands against France and Britain and thus prepare the British public for possible trouble.

President May Be Invited to London

Special Cable to The Post.

London, Jan. 25.—President Roosevelt will probably be invited to visit London this year, according to the London Star. The paper says:

"The King and Queen, when they are in Washington this summer, will probably invite President and Mrs. Roosevelt to visit London. While on this side of the Atlantic, they could also pay an official visit to Paris. The question will be discussed with President and Mme. Lebrun when they are in London in March."

President Sees Horse Show Open Drive on Paralysis

Errol Flynn Rides Roosevelt Steed And Receives Cup From First Lady; Officials Pack Hall at Fort Myer

Under the eyes of the President and Mrs. Roosevelt, crack military and civilian riders last night staged a display of horsemanship in the Fort Myer Riding Hall to help open the Nation's campaign against infantile paralysis.

They rode to the applause of more than 3,000 persons, including high Government and military officials, who filled the brightly lighted hall for the opening night of the two-day show.

With the President in the central box were Gen. Malin Craig, chief of staff, and Mrs. Craig, Col. George S. Patton, jr., commandant at the fort, and Mrs. Patton, Secretary of Commerce Hopkins, and Errol Flynn, movie star.

A spectator through most of the performance, Flynn joined the riders in the competition for park and road hacks. He rode John Roosevelt's horse, Badger, handsome brown halfbred hunter, raised in Virginia.

He received from Mrs. Roosevelt a silver cup for his part in the show and the paralysis campaign. The actor will return to Washington Saturday, with his wife, Lili Damita, to join other Hollywood stars in the President's Birthday Ball celebration here.

Gets Cavalry Salute

First formal event in the celebration here, the Fort Myer show also became the signal for the start of the national campaign. High lights of the show were broadcast over a national radio hook-up.

With the crowd already filling the hall, the President arrived shortly after 8 p. m. Escorted by the machine gun troop of the Tenth Cavalry, led by Capt. Hugh Waddell, the White House car drove in through the north door. The President received the salute of the cavalry, and heard "Hail to the Chief" from the Fort Myer band as he entered the box.

A moment later the sergeant bugler, wearing the colorful blue and gold uniform of the old Third Mounted Rifles, forerunners of the Third Cavalry, sounded the tally-ho and the show was in full swing.

In the opening event Col. and Mrs. Patton saw their daughter, Miss

Garner Leads Senate Drive To Cut WPA

Emerges as 'Economy' Strategist; Showdown Near; Close Vote Seen

By Robert C. Albright.

The drive to sustain the $150,000,000 House cut in the President's relief estimates yesterday broadened into an out and out test of Administration spending policies in the Senate, as both sides predicted victory in the most intensive campaign for votes of the present session.

As a showdown neared, Vice President Garner, silent foe of the new spending program, emerged in the background as the strong man behind the Senate Appropriations Committee bid for the 17 per cent reduction in deficiency relief estimates.

A vote will come late today or tomorrow on an Administration amendment to restore the $150,000,000 slash, with the outcome so doubtful that the Senate verdict may turn on a few votes. Should the President win, the Administration will have demonstrated its control of the new Senate, at the same time administering a rebuke to the House.

Absence of five senators favoring the cut yesterday weakened the strength of the economy drive. Debate dragged along through five listless hours, with neither side pressing for an immediate vote. Pairs were sought to offset the loss from absentees, and the result may turn on the success of that move.

Both Senate Majority Leader Barkley, Administration champion of the full $875,000,000 appropriation, and Senator Adams (Democrat), of

Lucius Beebe Blames Women For Drabness of Male Dress

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 25.—Women are the worst enemies of the would-be well-dressed man, vouchsafes Lucius Beebe, boulevardier and sartorial cynosure.

Most men have modish potentialities, he told the Merchant Tailors Designers Association Style Show today, but every time he tries to indulge his fancies, the women get jealous and scare him off with sarcastic remarks.

"That she overdresses," Beebe remarked, "cannot register on what we call—with a twitter—the feminine mind."

A good way for a man to be sartorially outstanding, he suggested, is for him to depart from convention in one article of apparel. "A single article which violates convention can be good taste, while two make for vulgarity."

He admitted the line between what's stylish and what's eccentric is a hard one to draw, and commented, "The average man succeeds in being little more than dull."

Beebe wore a double-breasted blue-gray suit, a stiff bosom gray shirt with horizontal pencil stripes, and brown-and-gray striped tie, a white handkerchief and a red carnation.

About half his audience was feminine, and in the wake of his jibes at "the weaker sex," and his remark that a man should use "a reasonable sense of restraint" in clothes, one of the ladies blurted out:

"Do you regard yourself as a man with a reasonable sense of restraint?"

Beebe glanced at her, and replied:

"Impertinence, I call it."

John L. Lewis A Dictator, Martin Says

Quits CIO Board Charging 'Stalinist' Methods Are Splitting Labor

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 25.—Homer Martin, storm center in a fight within the United Automobile Workers of America, charged tonight that C. I. O. Chieftain John L. Lewis was adopting the methods of his "Stalinist allies" and splitting the forces of labor by "dictatorial policies."

In a letter to the president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations Martin resigned from the C. I. O. executive board and said he could "no longer subscribe to the policies and tactics to which you and your representatives have resorted."

Martin, "deposed" yesterday by the C. I. O. as president of the auto workers' union, insisted he was still president of the international union and said an "overwhelming majority"—300,000 or more—of the 400,000 members—were behind him in his fight with the "majority clique" of the U. A. W. executive board.

"Suspended" Board Recognized

The C. I. O., through Vice Presidents Philip Murray and Sidney Hillman, recognized as the U. A. W. board the 15 members whom Martin had "suspended," and recognized R. A. Thomas, instead of Martin, as president.

Martin's letter charged Lewis had "utterly repudiated" the principles and policies of "a democratic labor movement."

"Your action has convinced me and multitudes who have followed you that you are unable to rise above your personal ambitions and dictator complex," he added.

Charges Stalinist Methods

"Having driven the International Ladies Garment Workers Union out of the ranks of the C. I. O. by your totalitarian method of leadership you are now driving the United Automobile Workers of America into the same position," he charged further.

"In your actions you have adopted the methods of your Stalinist allies and your agents have resorted to downright misrepresentations and deliberate falsehoods.

"For example: You have represented the C. I. O. as guaranteeing the autonomy of the United Automobile Workers of America at the very moment when you and your lieutenants were conspiring to destroy it. . . . While we were engaged in carrying on the work of our organization, your lieutenants, Philip Murray, Sidney Hillman and others, were holding secret conferences both with members of the United Automobile Workers of America and the automobile employers, for the purpose of transferring control of the organization to yourself."

"Your lieutenants have sought, in recent public statements, to take

Amlie Red, Says State Legislature

Wisconsin Body Urges Roosevelt to Void Nomination; Senators To Weigh Charge

By the Associated Press.

A formal protest by the Wisconsin Legislature added fuel yesterday to a developing Senate controversy over the appointment of Thomas R. Amlie to the Interstate Commerce Commission.

A resolution passed by the Legislature, which is controlled by Republicans and Democrats, urged President Roosevelt to withdraw his nomination of the 41-year-old former Wisconsin Congressman, a Progressive Party member, to succeed 71-year-old Balthasar H. Meyer, Republican, Commissioner for 27 years. The resolutions accused Amlie of being a Communist.

William D. Carroll, chairman of the Wisconsin Democratic State Central Committee, said yesterday Wisconsin Democrats proposed to send a delegation to Washington to oppose confirmation of Amlie. Carroll said the plan was approved at a party caucus. "We consider him unfit for the post," he said.

Chairman Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, said the Interstate Commerce Committee would consider this resolution when it holds hearings on Amlie's nomination. Wheeler said also that Amlie will be given full opportunity to defend his record.

G. O. P. May Vote as Unit

Wheeler had said previously that while he was not well acquainted with Amlie, he was inclined to favor the appointment.

Although Senator La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, said he was not surprised and was undisturbed by the Wisconsin Legislature's action. Senator Wiley (Republican), of Wisconsin, said he intended to study Amlie's record thoroughly before determining his stand.

There were indications that Republican Senators might vote as a unit on the Amlie appointment after a caucus yesterday morning at which the matter was discussed. Some Senators said several voiced opposition at this meeting.

Opposition also developed in the ranks of Democrats who have not always supported Administration policies.

Others Support Amlie

Discussing President Roosevelt's statement Tuesday that he had appointed Amlie as a non-Democrat on a 11-member commission which includes six Democrats, Senator Burke (Democrat), Nebraska, said:

"I don't know that he (Amlie) has to be opposed to the Democratic form of Government in order to qualify as a non-Democrat."

Senator McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, said he did not consider the Amlie appointment satisfactory.

"His views, as I read them," McCarran said, "are entirely too radi-

D. C. Woman Left In Port by Cupid And Maritime Law

Baltimore, Jan. 25 (AP).—Mrs. Garnet Jones couldn't get her $1,180 back today, and she didn't have a husband, or a honeymoon, or any Central American gold, and to top it all off Federal Judge Coleman declined to help her get any of them.

But the 40-year-old Washington, D. C. beauty shop operator did have a decrepit motor yacht—the Vesta.

She said Paxson Hayes persuaded her to sell her beauty salon and give him the $1,180 so he could buy the Vesta and they could go on a honeymoon jaunt to Yucatan, hunting hidden gold and archeological treasures.

She and Mrs. Sallie Smith, another Washington beauty shop proprietor, and Mrs. Jones' son started off with Hayes aboard the Vesta. The expedition was abandoned at Norfolk when Hayes declined to marry Mrs. Jones, she testified.

In dismissing her, suit for the $1,180, Judge Coleman said:

"I find no coercion was practiced in inducing you to go on the high seas of matrimony or on the other high seas."

Brig. Gen. Sultan, Ex-Commissioner, Sent to Hawaii

Brig. Gen. Dan I. Sultan, former District Commissioner, has been ordered to command the Twenty-second Infantry Brigade, stationed at Schofield Barracks, Hawaii.

Gen. Sultan's transfer to Hawaii is believed to forecast thoroughgoing expansion of Army activities and national defense preparations. It is expected he will direct important engineering additions and serve as a technical adviser to naval officials in projected strengthening of the fleet base at Pearl Harbor.

Gen. Sultan has been on duty at Fort Logan, Colo., since leaving the Board of Commissioners.

Sweater Added To Police Garb To Save Blouse

A navy blue sweater with the letters "M. P. D. C." attached has been added to the wardrobe of the local police.

Police Chief Ernest W. Brown said his men frequently wear summer blouses under overcoats, "which causes this garment to wear out quicker."

The Commissioners approved the sweater, which according to Maj. Brown, will save money in uniforming the force because the blouse is about three times the cost of the sweater.

Six Ruined Provinces Under Martial Law

U. S. Writer Tells Of Fire, Burials; Saw Few Homes Whole in Area

By Charles Serry.

Copyright, 1939, by the United Press.

Chillan, Chile, Jan. 25.—I was the first newspaperman to reach this city of Chillan after it was devastated by last night's earthquake with a death toll of at least 10,000.

With Capt. Enrique Byers, of the Chilean army, I took off from El Bosque military airport at Santiago at 9:25 a. m. today. There was no room for passengers in the Junkers bomber and I was obliged to lie on the floor with a parachute strapped on me. I viewed the stricken area far south of Santiago through a slit in the plane.

After flying as far south as Talcahuano Naval Base, we headed north again toward Chillan, whose devastation we had seen only from the air on the southward flight.

Some Pray, Some Weep

We landed in a field near a farmhouse about 5 miles from Chillan. A heavy black smoke hung over the city from the fires which had raged through the night.

The owner of the farm, who had seen us circling for a landing, came over to greet us. He said there were "thousands dead."

As we traveled toward Chillan in his automobile, most of the farmhouses I saw were in ruins. The road had 8-inch cracks. Citizens wandered around the ruins of their homes, some praying, some weeping and others staring ahead. All were covered with a thick, yellow adobe dust.

One man ran about shouting "I lost four children, but (and his voice rose to a scream) I'm alive, I'm alive!"

Another dug into the ruins in search of boards to make a crude coffin in which to bury his wife, whose decapitated body I saw under the ruins of his house.

Hospital Standing

In Chillan, the office building of La Discussion, the city's chief morning newspaper, was in ruins. The only building that remained standing around the main square was a three story white building whose owner invited me in. The daughters of the house said the building "shook like jelly" during the earthquake.

The city's hospital did not collapse, although its walls were cracked. Two doctors worked there throughout the morning, performing 40 operations without anaesthetics or other supplies. They asked me to tell Santiago authorities to rush gauze, ether and other medical necessities.

I was told that two theaters collapsed, each trapping approximately 200 persons.

I saw the headless body of a girl, crushed by a door whose knob she grasped in her hand.

I made my way through bodies lying everywhere, many of them crushed beyond recognition or with heads and limbs missing, to the barracks of the O'Higgins Infantry Regiment. The barracks were a heap of splintered ruins, under which two lieutenants, Carlos Cruzat and Alberto Rivas, were buried. Several enlisted men were injured. The colonel in command transferred his headquarters to the main plaza of the city and proclaimed a state of

Breach Healed, Iran Renews U. S. Relations

Full friendly diplomatic relations between the United States and Iran were restored yesterday as Secretary of State Hull received a formal call from Dr. Ali Akbar Daftary, new charge d'affaires for Iran, who immediately reopened that country's legation here.

The legation was closed three years ago a short time after the Iranian minister, Ghaffar Djalar, was arrested on a speeding charge at Elkton, Md. He asserted he had been denied the diplomatic protection due him, had been handcuffed and otherwise mistreated. The United States legation at Teheran has remained open.

Secretary of State Hull expressed pleasure at the restoration of full relations and said the action came about largely through a recent visit by Wallace Murray, chief of the Division of Far Eastern Affairs, to Teheran, where he was received most courteously, the Secretary said, by the Shah.

Trees Uprooted, Metal Roof Blown Off as Wind Ushers in Cold

A new cold wave headed into Washington yesterday with a Northwest gale, which played havoc with signs and awnings, shook the Weather Bureau's observation tower, lifted a heavy metal roof from a house on Thirteenth street and uprooted numerous trees throughout the city.

The mercury was expected to hit a low of 16 degrees before dawn today after dropping steadily yesterday from a high of 40 degrees. At 6:15 p. m. the thermometer registered 24 degrees, the Weather Bureau reported.

56-Mile Wind

Wind out of the Northwest registered as high as 56 miles per hour during the day at the Weather Bureau. Sudden changes in velocity rocked the observation tower at Twenty-fourth and M streets, officials reported. Fair weather with slowly rising temperatures were forecast for today.

As he listened to his radio, J. B. Hoellman, of 5304 Thirteenth street, was shaken by a ripping crash over his head. He looked out the window to see a 25x30-foot section of his metal roof sail across the street and land in a neighbor's yard, barely missing several automobiles.

Blizzards in Virginia

Raging blizzards swept a 12-mile area around Winchester, Va., early yesterday, causing Frederick County schools to close early. Six inches of snow was recorded in a short time.

Heavy drifts piled up by wind blocked traffic, and at noon highway department plows were called to Cross Junction and Whiteham. Teachers at Whitacre sent pupils home at the outbreak of the storm.

Emergency calls were sent for police to remove fallen trees en-

Otter Flees From Romance At Zoo; Finds Death Instead

LUTRA CANADENSIS.

A female otter, balking at a romance that was obnoxious to her, broke out of her cage at the Zoo yesterday, killed a duck, and then herself was killed by a guard.

It was the most exciting day the Zoo has known since a local dentist, back in 1933, carried away an ocelot, thinking it was a domestic tabby.

Lutra canadensis, the sleek female otter from Florida, was privately owned. Her owner deposited her at the Zoo Tuesday, hoping she would mate with a male otter that has been there for some time. But as has happened so often in such forced marriages, it didn't work.

Lutra found a hole in the rusty sheet iron that held her captive and squeezed through. Traveling along on her short little legs, she made it

Chillan Razed, 3,000 Dead in Concepcion; Many Towns Leveled; Total Loss Unknown

By the United Press.

Santiago, Chile, Jan. 25.—The rich agricultural and coal mining region of south-central Chile tonight lay devastated by an earthquake that took an appalling toll of lives, with government officials reporting 8,000 dead in Chillan and Concepcion.

The government officially estimated the deaths in Chillan, one of the cities hardest hit by the disaster, at 5,000. Other estimates set the figure at 10,000 or higher.

Naval authorities received a telegram from the admiral in command of the naval base at Talcahuano, the port of Concepcion, which said:

"Three thousand dead in Concepcion."

Officials feared the death toll would mount considerably when reports were received from all parts of the stricken area.

Accurate estimates of casualties in smaller cities were impossible, because of ruptured communications.

The newspaper El Imparcial, in Santiago, put the total death toll at 10,000.

Dead Buried in Streets

The pilot of a special National Airlines plane which the government dispatched to survey the earthquake area reported that Chillan, a city of 40,000 inhabitants 220 miles south of Santiago, was "completely wrecked."

He estimated that approximately 10,000 persons were killed there, and said he saw only three houses standing in 144 city blocks.

[Lieut. Yanez, an aviator, landed at Chillan and returned with the information that 5,000 persons perished, the Associated Press said.

[Many more of the 10,000 injured were fatally hurt, he said.

[The shock opened fissures in Chillan streets 12 feet wide, Lieut. Yanez declared, and huge ditches were being dug to bury the dead.

[A Pan-American-Grace Airlines pilot told his headquarters at Lima that Chillan was in flames. His estimate of the dead there was 4,000.

[Pan-American-Grace said the pilot, Byron Rickards, had taken government officials and medicines to Chillan and that the company had placed four planes in operation for rescue work between Santiago and Chillan, and Chillan and Concepcion.]

Mayor Asks Aid

[The Mayor of Concepion messaged the government: "Situation most serious as a result of the earthquake. Unable to state number of casualties but many hundreds, probably thousands. Require food and medical aid. Desperately urgent."—Editor's note.]

Passengers who arrived here in a plane from Chillan also placed the death toll there at 10,000. They said only four or five houses were left standing in the city and that about three or four members of each family had been killed.

The earthquake occurred at 11:35 p. m. Tuesday. Many persons, particularly in the smaller towns, were in bed and were trapped under fallen walls and roofs.

Foreign Minister Abraham Ortega proclaimed martial law in the entire region to prevent looting. Property damage was said to be heavy and several small towns and villages were reported to have been wiped out.

THE NINTH JUSTICE

If you are curious about what is in the mind of the new Justice, Felix Frankfurter, you can get more than an inkling from what he said before Franklin Roosevelt became President. After 1932 it was almost a foregone conclusion that the Harvard professor would become a Supreme Court Justice.

* * * *

Mme. Justice . . . polishes prose

I have just reviewed the four lectures Justice Frankfurter delivered at Yale in 1930. Roosevelt was still a gleam in Jim Farley's eye. Felix Frankfurter (Felix for lucky, happy, successful; Frankfurter for a family which had moved to Vienna from Frankfurt, Germany) was still a private citizen.

* * * *

(First, it's useful to know that among friends he is argumentative, fun-loving, talkative; that his wife is the daughter of a Congregationalist minister, of an old New England family; that there's a legend about his being late at his own law classes; and he's another eminent gentleman who's reputed to get along with 4 and 5 hours of sleep).

* * * *

Since five Justices can enunciate the law of the land, a Justice who serves 20 years is as powerful in American history as a President who serves four, with several score Senators and Representatives thrown in for good measure.

"—Justice Frankfurter's hot dogs"

Also, there will continue to appear before their old professor, and to practice his doctrines at dozens of Washington desks, dozens of his young disciples, sometimes called Frankfurter's "hot dogs," both pro- and anti-New Deal, and scores who have imbibed his opinions from them, over hundreds of highballs and glasses of milk. (I wonder whether as a justice he will treat them as rough as he did as a teacher.) So he casts a long shadow.

* * * *

From his Yale lectures it is obvious that no one loves the Constitution more than Justice Frankfurter. He loves it more, probably, than the Bible, either Old or New Testament. Those who fear he will treat the Constitution like a scrap of paper should be happily disappointed.

* * * *

(Incidentally he's a great telephoner, writer of informal telegrams and a tireless letter writer; probably no other professor in America has spent so much of his income on phone and wire tolls and stamps. Once he telephoned his friend, Lady Astor, to get her help for an 82-year-old uncle who was in trouble with the Nazis in Vienna.)

* * * *

Frankfurter does not love money, and does not worry much about it. He has declined jobs that pay many times his Harvard salary. So his most dangerous utterance, from the viewpoint of people who are concerned about money, is:

"The States need . . . wide latitude in devising ways and means for paying the bills of society and in using taxation as an instrument of social policy."

You could put two chickens in every pot, two cars in every garage, with that sentence in a majority opinion—maybe.

"—a gay gesture by Holmes"

Frankfurter venerates the attitude, the opinions and the memory of Justice Holmes. In the four Yale lectures he quotes him lavishly.

It was laughable that critics of Frankfurter, who heard that once when Frankfurter called at Holmes' sickroom Holmes thumbed his nose at him, took the story seriously. It was merely a gay gesture of affection for an old friend.

* * * *

Much of the New Deal is foreshadowed in these lectures. He lambasted prohibition. He foretold the New Deal utilities policy. He urged the benefit of legislative experiments by States. He suggested regional projects and compacts between States—the little TVA's. He defended the adequacy of the Constitution, and argued it was flexible enough to permit some changes made, as did President Roosevelt later.

* * * *

(By the way, some of Justice Frankfurter's telegrams are humorous . . . He has on occasion admitted he was wrong . . . His wife polishes his writings . . . Though his manner is usually deferential and punctilious, his occasional bruesqueness caused someone to say of him that he has not mastered the Boston trick of gracious rudeness.)

* * * *

Justice Frankfurter quoted extensively from Elihu Root and Charles Evans Hughes, the eminent Republican statesmen, seemingly with approval.

One of his memorable unflattering comments on the Supreme Court (which he may remember when he takes his seat) was:

"Since 1920 the Court has invalidated much legislation . . . always over the protest of its most distinguished members."

Some of his colleagues on the bench will remember it, too.

A. F. L. Moves To Amend U. S. Labor Act

Walsh to Introduce Proposals Aimed at Relations Board

First move for amendment of the Wagner labor relations act was made yesterday by the American Federtion of Labor in a series of amendments to "guarantee fair and equitable administration of the law by the national Labor Relations Board."

Introduced by Senator Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, at the request of President William Green, of the A. F. of L., the proposals are expected to precipitate renewed hostilities between the federation and the C. I. O., in whose favor, Green charges, the board discriminates.

Proposed Amendments

The amendments propose:

To require the board to respect the right of craft groups to decide for themselves by majority vote who their bargaining representatives shall be.

To curtail the power of the board to invalidate legal contracts between employers and labor organizations.

To correct board procedure so that all affected parties will be given due notice, accorded a fair hearing, protected against abuses of discretion and assured of adequate judicial review of wrongful decrees.

Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, chairman of the Senate Labor Committee to which the Walsh amendments were referred, said he was opposed to "revision in any way that will interfere with the proper working out of the law." He said the amendments will be referred to the Labor Department and the Labor Relations Board for report, and later hearings will be held if Walsh asks them.

Judicial Review Advocated

"Nobody will object to constructive revision, but I think this can best come from judicial review," said Thomas.

In the House, Chairman Mary Norton, of the House Labor Committee, said her group plans no hearings on revision of the labor act unless and until the Senate acts.

Senator Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, chief Senate critic of the board, said he approved of the federation's amendments, but will have additional changes of his own to propose next week. He said he thought the principal need is for an amendment separating the board's present power to both judge and prosecute.

In introducing the Green amendments, Senator Walsh said the proposed A. F. L. changes are intended to strengthen fundamental purposes of the act by curbing the discretionary powers of the board to the end that all legitimate labor organizations, honest employers and the public will benefit.

In one of the amendments, seeking to curtail the board's power to abrogate contracts between an employer and a labor organization, the Walsh bill follows closely the recent decision of the Supreme Court in the Consolidated Edison case.

Concessions to Employers

Some of the amendments apparently make definite concessions to employers. One permits employers to express opinions on matters of interest to their employes or the public, provided the opinions are not accompanied by acts of discrimination or threats. One lets an employer as well as an employe, file a petition for an employe election to determine the proper bargaining agent of the workers.

Other amendemnts in the series proposed by Green provide:

Every known interested party must be served with due process and afforded an opportunity to appear in any case.

Definite time limits would be established within which the board must act on petitions for elections and on complaints of unfair labor practices.

Decisions of the board in representation cases would be made reviewable by the courts.

Secrecy of the board's files would be lifted so interested parties could examine material on which decisions were made.

Affidavits of prejudice could be filed within certain limits against trial examiners considered unfair by any party in a case.

Maine Denies Pardon To Nine C. I. O. Strikers

Augusta, Me., Jan. 25 (AP).—Maine's executive council today unanimously rejected pardon pleas of nine C. I. O. organizers serving five-month jail sentences each for conspiracy in the 1937 Lewiston-Auburn shoe strike.

The organizers were convicted of conspiracy to injure the business of the Charles Cushman Shoe Co. of Auburn. The United States Supreme Court refused to review the case.

Tydings' Office Swamped With Letters Pro and Con on Lifting Spanish Embargo

By the Associated Press.

She movements for and against Spanish arms embargo is causing a rush of work in the office of Senator Tydings (Democrat), Maryland.

TYDINGS

Since the movement against lifting the embargo started about ten days ago, nearly 10,000 telegrams, letters and postal cards have been received protesting against any such effort. That flood of communications hardly had been opened until a counter movement urging the embargo be lifted began to pour in.

The Senator's office force, which tries to answer all communications, may have to abandon this procedure.

Lincoln, Nebr., Jan. 25 (AP).—Nebraska's unicameral legislature voted 25 to 15 today to memorialize the National House of Representatives' Ways and Means Committee to "carefully consider and report out promptly" the Townsend old age pension plan bill.

Congress was asked yesterday to reimburse the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and the City of Baltimore to the tune of $404,919 for money spent on national defense works during the Civil War.

Senators Walsh (Democrat), and Lodge (Republican), of Massachusetts, proposed in one bill the payment of $244,885 to their State, while Senator Tydings (Democrat), Maryland, asked $171,034 for Baltimore in another. Tydings said the Baltimore claim was substantiated by the comptroller general in a report filed with the Senate, May 3, 1930.

President Roosevelt yesterday nominated Jacob Crane, of Illinois, to be assistant administrator and director of project planning of the United States Housing Authority.

Maj. Gen. C. M. Wesson, Army ordnance chief, produced a new semiautomatic rifle for inspection by the House Military Committee.

For the benefit of photographers, Chairman May (Democrat), of Kentucky, picked up the weapon, sighted it and pulled the trigger.

There was a flash and a loud report. May and Wesson jumped back.

But it was only a faulty photoflash bulb that had exploded.

Gas Light Union Wins Closed Shop

Judge Cayton Makes Award Under New Law; Lauds Employes

A "closed shop" in the Washington Gas Light Co. in 30 days was ordered by Judge Nathan Cayton, sitting as arbitrator of a dispute between the company and the District Gas Workers Union, to which 93 per cent of the employes belong.

"First consideration was given," Judge Cayton said in announcing his decision, "to the rights and needs of the consuming public. I have next considered, on a basis of equality, the rights and benefits involved for the company and its workers."

Settlement Is Peaceful

Every dispute except the closed shop, which provoked talk of a strike recently, was peacefully settled in negotiations. The company and the union agreed to take advantage of the arbitration provision of the small claims court law and to abide by Judge Cayton's decision.

His award, announced in a written opinion yesterday, followed several weeks of study.

Judge Cayton reviewed the history of the dispute, from the formation of the union in June, 1937, and its growth until 1,161 of the 1,245 employes of the company were members. He said the evidence convinced him that the union had accomplished:

A pay increase of $323,000 a year, the first raise in several years; reclassification of employes, resulting in raises totaling $42,000 a year; a 40-hour five-day week; a scale of overtime pay; a system of vacations and sick leave; recognition of seniority rights; helped overcome favoritism and nepotism, of which, "according to the vice president and general manager of the company, 'there was more of that than in any company to which I have been used to;" introduction of safety measures; established a grievance committee; improved employe morale; by these measures benefited the company, its stockholders and the consumer public.

Achievements Undisputed

The achievements of the union were not disputed by Everett J. Boothby, vice president and general manager, who was the only company witness at the hearing.

The opinion said that "in fairness to the company it should be stated that in the last three years or so there had been manifested an awakened sense of responsibility toward its employes, with regard to pay, working conditions and general status."

The company, Judge Cayton observed, had not challenged the legality of closed shop agreement. However, he cited two cases in which such contacts were upheld.

Hewes, Prettyman, Awalt and Smiddy were counsel for the company. The union was represented by Attorneys James F. O'Reilly and Eugene B. Sullivan and its president, Steward R. Carter, jr.

The Post Corrects An Inaccuracy in Historical Fact

On page 1 of yesterday's Post, in a story describing presentation to the House of a demand for impeachment of Labor Secretary Francis Perkins, appeared a reference to W. W. Belknap, Secretary of War in Grant's Cabinet. The demand yesterday, said the story, "marked the first attempt to impeach a Cabinet officer since 1876, when Secretary of War Belknap was absolved of accepting bribes."

As a matter of fact, Belknap, charged with selling Army post trading agencies, resigned, March 7, 1876. After his resignation, the House presented to the Senate a case for impeachment, which was quashed for lack of jurisdiction. The Senate, however, on the question of Belknap's guilt, supported the charge, 37 to 22.

The Post is glad to make this correction in the interest of historical accuracy.

Mrs. Roosevelt to Speak

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt will head a list of speakers tonight at 7:30 at a dinner and discussion of "Rural Youth as a National Asset" sponsored by the National Trustees of the Alliance for Guidance of Rural Youth, in the Mayflower Hotel. Senator Arthur Capper and Commissioner of Education John W. Studebaker will speak.

2 House Bills Ask Inquiry of FCC and Radio

McNinch Prepares To Submit Plan To Reform Agency

Two resolutions calling for a sweeping investigation of the Federal Communications Commission and the radio industry were introduced in the House yesterday as Chairman Frank R. McNinch prepared to submit a bill to reform the FCC as a three-man administrative agency.

The resolution, which scolded the commission for disregarding its own rules and the communications act and for yielding to political pressure, were sponsored by Representatives Connery (Democrat), and Wigglesworth (Republican), both of Massachusetts.

They were similar to a resolution that was defeated by a small margin last year after Administration pressure.

Earlier Chairman Wheeler, of the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce, had asked McNinch to submit a bill to set up a three-man agency to supplant the FCC. The legislation was promised early next week.

Senator Wheeler, adopting a procedure contrary to that suggested by President Roosevelt, said the reorganization bill would be enacted before steps were taken to clarify the communications act so as to provide a definite policy guide for the new commission.

As the present FCC will be abolished with the establishment of a new agency, all seven members will go out of office, though, of course, one or more of them could be appointed to the new commission.

Three Branches Separate

Under the new plan, it is understood that radio, telephone and telegraph would be governed as separate divisions. A similar system was in operation under the seven-man FCC when McNinch took office, and he promptly abolished it.

Representative Connery, who has taken up the cudgel left by his late brother in the House, said the three-man commission, unless properly manned, might be used in a dictatorial fashion because of the concentration of authority.

Both House resolutions charged numerous irregular and monopolistic practices.

Connery's resolution called attention to the unsuccessful effort of McNinch to exempt FCC employes from the civil service and predicted that the current chain-monopoly inquiry by the FCC would result in a "whitewash."

He charged that radio facilities had been denied to civic, farm, labor and educational organizations. His proposed investigation would cover the character of programs and advertising rates charged by stations and networks, as well as violations of the communications act.

Both resolutions propose the setting up of a seven-man committee of House members, to be named by the Speaker. Both were referred to the House Rules Committee.

Neville Miller, president of the National Association of Broadcasters, offered the industry's full co-operation in rewriting the Federal radio law. The President, he said, had "put his finger on the core of the radio problem" in proposing that the act be clarified.

Murphy Weighs Federal Protection Of Civil Liberties

New York, Jan. 25 (AP).—Creation of a special unit of the Department of Justice to combat violations of civil liberties is under consideration.

This was disclosed today by Attorney General Murphy, here for a visit with local Federal prosecutors.

Murphy said he had directed a member of his staff "to make an exhaustive study of the Federal civil liberties statute . . . and the rights of the people thereunder . . . in order to determine whether the Department of Justice should have a unit of administration to effectively preserve civil liberties."

Cotton Council Elects Roper Vice President

Dallas, Jan. 25 (AP).—The National Cotton Council of America today chose Oscar Johnson, of Scott, Miss., president and Daniel C. Roper, recently-retired Secretary of Commerce, vice president.

Directors of the council, meeting with 200 representatives of cotton-growing sections of the South, also elected Lamar Fleming of Houston, Tex., and Harold Young, of Little Rock, Ark., vice presidents. Roper, from Harleyville, S. C., is a cotton grower and breeder of cotton seed.

Copy Fascists In Faith, Unity, U. S. Is Urged

Cause and Cure of War Delegates Hear Talks, 'Indict' Neutrality Law

A supernational society of nations for lasting world peace and emulation of the fascist qualities of faith, courage and the recognition that the earth is a single entity, were advocated in speeches before 650 delegates at the final session of the Conference for the Cause and Cure of War last night.

Earlier in the day, delegates had adopted a program for the organizations of women they represent, and a "call to action" was adopted declaring "the neutrality law has failed of its purpose," and indicting it as "a major contributing factor in the present strife and confusion of the world."

The conference recommended positive action for cultural, economic and political co-operation among nations of the Western Hemisphere; continuance of reciprocal trade agreements; consultation, when war threatens, with other signatories of anti-war treaties; utilization of the conference method to deal with specific international questions; co-operation of the United States with the League of Nations; adequate appropriations for the Department of State to meet responsibilities in the maintenance of peace, and a national defense policy correlated to a constructive foreign policy for peace which recognizes both the economic wastefulness of armaments and the necessity for internal economic stability.

Declaring that the League of Nations was rendered useless by the selfish ends to which it had been put by certain nations, the Right Rev. G. Ashton Oldham, Bishop of Albany, told the conference last night that peace could not be gained by pacifism, neutrality and isolation, which were monstrosities and impossibilities, but through closer world unity.

Dr. Hans Kohn, professor of modern European history at Smith College, insitsed "We must learn to imitate the good things of fascism in order to rouse us out of our complacency . . . We must learn to realize that . . . when a Tunis is taken it is a strategic wedge which will open up a continent and the same thing happening in Spain is a stepping stone to South America."

Hopkins to Reveal Business Program In 2 or 3 Weeks

Charging that "inaccurate and false statements" were made about him in the course of debate on his confirmation on the Senate floor, Secretary of Commerce Hopkins yesterday revealed he will disclose his business program in a speech within two or three weeks.

Observers believe his speech will be conciliatory in tone.

At his first press conference since his confirmation Secretary Hopkins disclosed that he will confer today and tomorrow with the Business Advisory Council, headed by W. A. Harriman, chairman of the Union Pacific. All problems concerning the Department of Commerce will be canvassed by the Secretary with the council.

Attorney General Murphy will address the council at luncheon today, former Secretary of Commerce Roper will be guest at a council dinner tonight, and Secretary of State Hull will speak to the group at luncheon tomorrow.

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 25 (AP).—A measure to outlaw sit-down strikes and set up a five-man board to mediate labor disputes was submitted to the Michigan Legislature today by Republican Gov. Fitzgerald.

The bill would require a ten-day notice before any strike could legally be called.

U. S. Will Recognize Franco In Few Months, Fish Predicts

When Insurgents Take Seaports America Will Acknowledge Them As Rulers of Spain, Says New Yorker

American recognition of the Franco government in Spain within the next few months was forecast yesterday by Representative Hamilton Fish, ranking Republican member of the Foreign Affairs Committee.

As the imminent fall of Barcelona raised Congressional interest in the Spanish war to a new high, two speakers on the floor of the Senate warned against efforts to lift the embargo on arms shipments to Spain, and on the other side of the Capitol, several Representatives privately predicted that the present law would be retained.

Meanwhile, a delegation from the American League for Peace and Democracy presented to members of Congress data designed to show that 3,000,000 organized workers affiliated with the C. I. O., A. F. L. and the railroad brotherhoods were in favor of "quarantining aggressors" by denying American materials to treaty-breakers and warmakers.

Declaring that "Franco is probably now in a position to end the war within a few months," Representative Fish asserted that "there is no question that we will recognize his government as soon as it obtains control of the seaports."

(The United States has not yet recognized the government of Manchukuo or the Italian conquest of Ethiopia.)

Leading a three-hour Senatorial discussion of American foreign policy, North Carolina's Senator Reynolds declared that the United States should stop trying to police the world and should concentrate on domestic problems.

He said this country should copy the "success" of dictatorial nations in attempting to solve problems of unemployment and surplus capital. In answer to a question of Senator Schwellenbach, liberal Washington Democrat, Reynolds said, "America would do well to provide concentration camps for the communists, nazis and others who are trying to overthrow this Government."

Senator Lewis, of Illinois, Democratic whip, advised the Senate that "far from removing the Spanish embargo, it should be tightened." The bearded Illinoisan warned that American arms shipments to Spain might be seized by the German or Italian allies of Franco. Such action, he said, would embroil this country in war.

On the other hand, Senator Nye, North Dakota Republican, inserted in the Congressional Record a declaration that the embargo put the United States in the position of "holding the arms of one side in Spain while the other dealt blows with outside help."

Effect Peace Gradually, Lodge Urges

Women Patriots Hear Senator, Officials At Conference Here

A "gradual approach" to the problem of world peace was urged upon the fourteenth Women's Patriotic Conference on Nationad Defense last night by Senator Lodge (Republican), of Massachusetts, in preference to the attempt "to guarantee peace for all the world at once."

In a flag-draped banquet hall at the Mayflower Hotel, the youthful Senator addressed approximately 1,000 women representing 33 patriotic organizations throughout the Nation.

Such a broad guarantee, Lodge warned, leads into the "theory of starting a war to stop a war" and so to such "dangerous proposals" as the League of Nations.

"Must Do Our Share"

While agreeing with other conference speakers on the need for a "strong development of the national defense," Senator Lodge declared: "If we maintain peace for the United States, we are doing our share toward maintaining peace for the world."

He criticized the United States for its "belated" stand in behalf of religious freedom, asserting that Russia's pledge to destroy religion "apparently did not interest" this country at all.

In the midst of religious persecutions in Mexico, he asserted, "we continued to praise Mexico . . . official spokesmen paid high tribute to the government of that country."

Defense Officials Talk

A battery of Army and Navy officials addressed the delegates yesterday and at an open forum answered "three times as many questions" as the women ever asked on national defense at one of their meetings before.

Maj. Gen. J. C. Breckinridge, of the Marine Corps, told the women that "the enemies at home must be crushed before there is the morale necessary for destruction of enemies from the outside." He listed soil erosion, ruined forests and crime as among the inside dangers.

Lieut. Logan Speaks

Lieut. D. N. Logan, of the Bureau of Aeronautics, declared the United States Navy had the "best aerial equipment in the world," but called attention to a lack of carriers, aircraft tenders, and shore establishments for training and overhauling.

Lieut. Col. Ira C. Eaker, of the War Department, described the 1939 American soldier as an "average, mild-mannered individual," who is sensative to the fluctuations in public esteem which cause him to be "sometimes in very popular esteem and sometimes not."

Senator Lucas (Democrat), of Illinois, addressing the women yesterday morning, struck out at the "internal subversive elements which gnaw like termites at our governmental structure" and declared a Nation "disrupted by internal dissension, poverty, misery and weakened in morale is an easy prey for a strong aggressor nation with fixed purposes."

A plea for a two-ocean Navy was presented by Representative Mott (Republican), of Oregon, who declared the United States had more cause to think it might be attacked by Japan, Germany, and Italy jointly than singly.

Rear Admiral William G. DuBose, chief constructor of the Navy, urged more Navy supply depots and additional shore-base facilities.

Maj. Gen. H. H. Arnold, chief of the Air Corps, outlined in an earlier session the details of the air program presented to Congress last week by the War Department and declared: "The way things are shaping up, the air defense of the continental United States and the safety of the Panama Canal demand an increase in our aerial forces, at least to the extent called for in the President's new program."

Coffman was stricken with the infection several weeks ago from an irritation caused by the sleeve of his uniform overcoat. He lives with his bride of less than a month at 118 Fifth street southeast.

A vast improvement of the present lighting system in the public schools was promised yesterday by the District Commissioners.

Other members of the committee are Dr. Thomas W. Gosling, Birch E. Bayh, Dr. E. B. Henderson, Dr. Joseph A. Murphy, Walter E. Kern, J. S. Zebley and A. H. Greenleaf.

Newman Fails to Find Wife And Baby Court Awarded Him

Harry Scott Newman, of 2804 Twenty-seventh street northwest was back in Washington yesterday after a fruitless search for his 19-month-old daughter, Joan Carol. While he was convinced that the baby and his wife were at the home of Mrs. Newman's parents, "somewhere in Chester, Pa.," every effort to find them had been unavailing.

Meanwhile two sisters of Mrs. Evelyne Marie Newman, who disappeared with her baby in defiance of a court order to surrender the child to her husband, said that the mother could be reached through them. They are the Misses Ruth and Louise Wilson, of Cathedral Mansions.

They said concerning their sister, "She'll come back if she gets some assurance that they'll not put her in jail, and she'll come back with the baby, but not unless she can keep the child."

"Is she with her parents?" the sisters were asked.

"She is with her baby," they replied.

Newman, and his attorney, Jean M. Boardman, said they could not enter into bargaining with the mother so long as the court order against her had not been satisfied.

"If she will come back to Washington with the baby and turn over the child to me, the contempt order of the court would be lifted because she had complied and there would be no danger of her being jailed," Newman said.

"All I wanted was to see Joan Carol and have her in the afternoons. If her mother comes gack she'll find me the most reasonable person.

After being separated, Newman's attorney asserted, the husband went to court, only because his wife refused to let him see their child. Justice Oscar R. Luhring awarded the child to the father last November 23. On January 20 Mrs. Newman was ordered by Justice Jennings Bailey of the District Court to appear and show cause why she should not be held in contempt of court for failing to surrender the infant.

Division Studied In Potomac Power Rate Saving Fund

Allocation of savings by domestic and business users of electric power under a proposed $400,000 reduction of rates will be considered today by the Public Utilities Commission which yesterday began its annual adjustment hearing with Potomac Electric Power Co. officials.

In previous years the annual savings have been equally shared by both commercial and domestic consumers. Officials believe the proposed reduction will be shared in a like manner this year.

B. M. Bachman, chief accountant of the P. U. C., yesterday reported the company's business in the last calendar year showed company earnings in excess of the permitted 6 per cent initial rate of return totaled $781,417. One half of the excess earnings are available for rate reduction in the following year.

5,000 Dead Reported in Chilean City

Quake

special train to direct relief measures.

At Concepcion, 40 per cent of the buildings were said to have been destroyed.

Soon after the shocks, telephone authorities reported the towns of Parral, Angol and Pailaqueque, the first two close together, had been destroyed. A score of deaths was reported.

Six provinces—Talca, Maule, Nuble, Concepcion, Biobio and Cautin—with a total population of 1,600,000, lay in the earthquake zone, covering roughly an area of 40,000 square miles.

A minute-long temblor also rocked Santiago at 11:34 p. m., causing panic, while the port of Valparaiso, west of here, was shaken.

The quake was felt as far east as the Province of Mendoza, Argentina, where recordings indicated it was of a violence unapproached in many years.

Julio Busto Navarrete, director of the Santiago Seismological Observatory, reported that the disturbance was of seventh degree intensity and that it centered between Concepcion and Tallan, a little to the east. The shocks were a continuation, he said, of those felt January 17, and came simultaneously with an eruption of the Quizapu Volcano east of Talca.

Amateur radio operators, first to report the extent of the catastrophe, said the business district of Temuco, a city of 40,000 inhabitants 430 miles south of Santiago, was heavily damaged.

Naval Base Damaged

The naval base at Talcahuano also suffered severe damage and the government announced 14 men had been killed there.

State railroad officials received reports that a freight train was derailed at Linares. Passenger trains were held up at other towns while pilot engines tested the tracks.

The government sped airplanes and trains with food, doctors, nurses, medicines and clothing to the scene. The price commissariat, created by the popular front government to prevent increase in living costs, was authorized to commandeer food for the homeless.

President Aguirre called upon all citizens to aid the victims of the earthquake, which was the most severe since the one in December, 1928, in the same region which killed 600.

Damage Widespread

[According to the Associated Press first reports listed these details of deaths and destruction elsewhere:

[Cauquenes, a city of 6,500 population 200 miles south of Santiago, officially was reported largely in ruins, with the inhabitants camping in the streets. The number of victims was not known, but was believed large.]

[Renaico, a small town 50 miles south of Concepcion—Majority of houses destroyed; railroad lines broken.

[Angol—Five dead.

[San Carlos, a small town near Chillan—In ruins.

[Parral—Many victims; town destroyed.

[Valparaiso, 60 miles northwest of Santiago and the northernmost point to report damage—Minor surface cracks in buildings.

[Curico—Many buildings damaged. Several walls collapsed. Hundreds of inhabitants slept in streets.

[Traiguen — Several buildings damaged.—Editor's Note.]

siege to maintain order. He commandeered food for the homeless.

En route from Santiago, I saw the ruins of Miraflores, Longavi, Parral, San Carlos and Concepcion. Several buildings in the latter city were still burning, and about six city residential blocks were destroyed. The Ritz Hotel, a concrete building; the new Cecil Hotel, the historic cathedral, the university and the large new Roxy Theater appeared undamaged.

5 Coast Guards Missing on Rescue

Cheboygan, Mich., Jan. 25 (AP).—Five Coast Guardsmen who set out in a lifeboat yesterday morning to search for three fishermen missing on an ice floe, had not returned today. The fishermen were located yesterday.

Coast Guard officers at Walkers Point, on Bois Blanc, said the men might be on Drummond Island or the boat might be frozen in the ice.

Chillan, World Famous Spa, Again Destroyed by Tremor

Ancient City, Renowned for Rheumatism Cure, Was Razed by Quake of 100 Years Ago; Thousands Die in Beds as Homes Crumble

Officials at the Chilean embassy here were appalled yesterday by the mounting casualties in the earthquake that devastated the central provinces of Chile Tuesday night. The disaster was a surprise, they said, for quakes are rare in that part of Chile.

Thousands are believed to have been killed in their beds when the quake came at midnight. The brick houses of the farming villages, built in the low rambling Spanish style, can stand the minor tremors to which Chileans are accustomed, but crumble in a real "terromoto."

With the destruction of Chillan, the center of a rich agricultural district that supplies most of Chile's wheat and vegetables as well as milk, goes also her most famous health resort. The waters of Chillan are famous the world over for the treatment of rheumatism, but now the baths and sanitariums are gone, the doctors and patients are dead, injured or dispersed.

It is not the first disaster in Chillan's history; the modern city was built after another earthquake, more than a hundred years ago. A few buildings survived, to form the "old quarter" of the modern city; but they, too, now are reported destroyed.

And Concepcion, city of textile mills, china factories, coal mines, has suffered its third and perhaps its worst catastrophe. One of the oldest cities in Chile, it was founded in 1550 by Pedro de Valdivia, Chile's first governor. Completely destroyed in 1724, it was rebuilt 30 years later, only to be partially destroyed again in 1835, in the same earthquake that wiped out Chillan.

Masaryk Speeches In U. S. Under Fire

Prague, Jan. 25 (AP).—The Czechoslovak foreign office has ordered investigation of statements made by the republic's former minister to London, Jan Masaryk, son of the late Thomas Masaryk, father of the Czecho-Slovak Republic, on his current visit to the United States, it was announced tonight.

On Monday in an address in New York Masaryk said there was little chance for success of further appeasement in Europe by the methods of Munich, which he attacked. "Very soonn," he said, "nothing will be left to give away except territory belonging to the great powtrs."

Hines Jury Ready For Second Trial

New York, Jan. 25 (AP).—The jury for the second trial of James J. Hines, long powerful Tammany district leader, on charges of contriving a lottery in operation of the $20,000,000-a-year Harlem policy racket was completed today except for two

Comdr. Maile Drowns as Wind Overturns Plane

Commander Francis Marlin Maile, jr., 47, recently United States naval attache in Berlin and formerly stationed here, drowned yesterday when wind overturned his seaplane after a landing at the Naval Air Station at Gould Island near Newport, R. I., according to the Associated Press.

A native of Indiana, he entered the naval service July 8, 1911, and had served here in the Bureau of Aeronautics three years, from 1931 to 1933, and previously from 1924 to 1926.

Brulatour Held In Shooting; Wife Called to Testify

New York, Jan. 25 (AP).—The shooting of Julius E. Brulatour brought about the arrest today of the 68-year-old financier, while his blonde wife, Actress Hope Hampton, answered a grand jury summons.

That body had adjourned for the day, however, and it was reported she had exercised her right to refuse to waive immunity, and thus might not be called to testify.

Brulatour was charged with illegal possession of the pistol that wounded him. He has insisted he shot himself accidentally Sunday night while cleaning a gun, but District Attorney Dewey's office said it wanted to know how the bullet could lodge in the back of the neck after passing through the ear, as it did in Brulatour's case, if the wound was self-inflicted. He was released on bail.

Adm. Leahy Backs Guam Naval Base

Holds It Would Delay Hawaii Attack Until Fleets Could Unite

Establishment of a fortified base at Guam would add "enormously" to American defense by delaying an attacking force long enough for the United States fleet to be brought from the Atlantic to meet it, Chief of Naval Operations Leahy said yesterday.

Emphasizing in his testimony before the House Naval Committee that the present proposal for development of Guam does not involve fortification of the island, Admiral Leahy said that he believed such a step advantageous in that it would:

Augment the defensive power of the American fleet by requiring its capture before attacking Hawaii, the Panama Canal or the United States.

"Practically prohibit" an invasion of the Philippines.

Be necessary as a base for the United States Asiatic squadron if we are to continue it.

Defensive Measure

Insisting that a strong base on the Pacific island would be strictly defensive, Admiral Leahy said that even under the full recommendations of the Hepburn board—not provided for in the bill—it would not be of "particular value" as an advanced base.

While Guam lies 3,000 miles west of Honolulu, among the Japanese mandated island, and is less than 1,500 miles from Japan, it lies out of range of bombing aircraft, Admiral Leahy said. Its capture would require a month, and would give the American fleet time to meet an attack on Hawaii, he added. No enemy would dare attack Hawaii while a fortified Guam was in existence, Leahy pointed out.

Urging adoption of the $85,000,000 program to provide aviation facilities at 12 locations in the Atlantic and Pacific, the chief of naval operations said that it constituted "sound and conservative requirements for peacetime operations" and "measures of preparedness upon which to base wartime expansion."

Shipping Vulnerable

"Even should we have a superior navy," Admiral Leahy told the committee, "our coastal shipping and shipping through the Caribbean and Gulf of Mexico would be vulnerable to hostile submarine attack unless adequate protective measures are taken for intensive air escort, and surface ship escort of United States shipping.

"The Alaskan area is particularly important. The shortest route (Great Circle course) from Asia to the United States passes close to the Aleutian chain of islands. Timely warning of the approach of hostile forces using this route is of the greatest importance as a defensive measure."

Questioned repeatedly by members as to present defensive power of the fleet, Admiral Leahy said it could (1) successfully defend the mainland of the United States against attack from either ocean but not both at once; (2) hold the Hawaiian Islands against any "reasonable expectation of attack;" (3) ultimately defeat an invasion of the Philippines. He stressed, however, that with the additions proposed, the war involved in any of the situations would be much shorter and less expensive.

Treaty Bars Down

Representative Maas (Republican), of Minnesota, devloped in questioning that an Army and Navy board had recommended fortification of Guam in 1919, but that the Washington Naval Treaty of 1922 barred further arming of bases in the western Pacific. This treaty, Admiral Leahy declared, has since been abrogated by Japan.

Meanwhile the Senate and House Military committees continued their examination of the details of the Army proposals in the $552,000,000 defense program. The Senate group heard Maj. Gen. H. H. Arnold, chief of Air Corps, explain the Army's air-expansion plans, while Maj. Gen. C. M. Wesson, chief of ordnance, told the House members of the program to correct deficiencies in Regular Army and National Guard weapons and military equipment.

A former national commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, now a Republican Congressman from Pennsylvania, yesterday called upon President Roosevelt to reveal his foreign policy before Congress acts on the proposed defense increases. Declaring that Germany "is committed to the East" and that Japan has no intention of attacking the United States, the Congressman, James E. Van Zandt, asked if the United States were "arming to fight some other nation's battle."

Plane Bids Opened

The War Department also revealed yesterday that it was planning to buy a new model of airplane developed in Europe for defense of cities against sudden air attack. Bids were opened at Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio, on an "interceptor" plane, capable of great climbing speed and possessing strong armament to shoot down attacking bombers. One of the companies expecting to compete recently said that its model could climb at a speed of 300 miles an hour, and carried a small cannon, machine guns and bombs.

dangering autoists and pedestrians near Beach drive in Rock Creek Park, in the 4900 block of Georgia avenue, and in the 1100 block of New York avenue northwest. A heavy plate glass window was shattered when blown in at a store at Seventh and E streets northwest.

Air traffic at the Washington Airport continued on schedule. Regular departure of Pan-American Clipper from Port Washington, N. Y., to Bermuda was postponed 24 hours, however, because of gales sweeping in from the Atlantic on New York.

Gales driving in on the New England States, New York and New Jersey were chilled by stinging snows. Washingtonians witnessed a freak snow which fell as the sun shone. The Weather Bureau said the cloud was traveling too fast to record any fall here.

Sub-Zero Lows Expected

Temperatures were sent to new sub-zero lwos in several Northern and Eastern States. New York City expected a low of 5 above, while upstate New York expected lows of 6 to 10 below zero. One man died in New York after he collapsed in attempts to dig his motor car out of a large snow drift. The first "ice bridge" of the winter began to form at Niagara Falls.

Baltimcre felt full force of the icy gale while snow-drifts piled up over highways in western Maryland.

Shipping Hampered

Chesapeake Bay shipping was hampered and nine ships were delayed in docking on the choppy waters. To open up one main lane of traffic, 17 snow-plows were put into action in western Maryland. Hagerstown and Frederick both reported damage from the wind.

A three-story building at St. Paul's parochial school in Baltimore was unroofed by wind as classes were dismissed. Streets were showered with brick and debris, narrowly missing children, as the roof hung precariously over the top of the front wall. No one was injured.

A low of 15 degrees was expected in Baltimore.

Associated Gas Officials Testify

The Federal Power Commission yesterday resumed its investigation of the Associated Gas & Electric Co. when company officials, reversing their position of last week, willingly apeared to testify.

James Y. Shinn, an official of the A. G. & E. companies, was questioned concerning service company subsidiaries which were recently disbanded.

When the hearing opened last week, counsel for the company refused to permit officials to testify. They contended the commission was "intermeddling" with local matters by attempting to obtain information for the Pennsylvania Public Utilities Commission.

Martin Quits CIO Board; Calls John L. Lewis a Dictator

credit for the establishment of responsible contractual relations with employers, while at the same time they were aiding and abetting those very forces within our union who were responsible for breaking down union discipline and for encouraging wildcat strikes and other violations of contracts. . . .

"Your agents did not dare to make an open move to impeach me; they have, therefore, in a sneaky and cowardly manner moved to strip me and the other loyal officers of the union of every right and power accorded us by the constitution of the union.

"There has not been a blacker chapter in the annals of American labor than that written by you and your agents in your deliberately planned sabotage of the vigorous efforts of our union to organize the employes of Henry Ford and obtain a collective bargaining agreement with the Ford Motor Co."

Explaining his reference to the Ford Co., Martin pointed to the statement of Richard Bennett, Ford personnel director, who said he had offered Martin an opportunity to organize Ford workers if he could.

Asserts Vote Was Blocked

The "settlement" was to have been placed before Ford locals for a vote, he said, but the anti-Martin bloc of the U. A. W. executive board "halted negotiations and refused to let the workers vote."

"Some said openly they were afraid the Ford workers would come into the convention organized, and have too many representatives there," Martin said.

Told he had been linked in some reports with the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, Detroit priest, Martin said he referred to Father Coughlin in a recent radio address as an "intellectual quack."

Martin's attack on Lewis brought a prompt reply from Hillman and Murray, who declared in a joint statement that his letter of resignation was "further indication of the haphazard, irresponsible methods he had employed in his relations with the members of the U. A. W., with the officials of the C. I. O., and with the automobile manufacturers.

"He reveals the same dictatormania," the statement added, "which was responsible for the contract violations which have occurred at times and for the almost continuous bickering in the official family of the auto union.

"It should be clear that the U. A. W. is not severing its relations with the C. I. O., but only that Homer Martin is deserting both the U. A. W. and the C. I. O. Of course, he cannot resign from the executive board of the C. I. O. He is no longer a member. Seventeen members of the U. A. W. board, acting under their constitution, have suspended him from office and divorced him of the right to call himself a spokesman of the auto union."

Declares Independence

Martin declared he could not, and would not, "bow down" to dictators, and expected no one to "grovel on their knees" before him. It was for that reason, he said, that he had decided to withdraw from the C. I. O. executive board.

He said the move did not mean that he was withdrawing the U. A. W. from the C. I. O. The union action, he added, would be decided by the workers themselves at their convention in Detroit next March 4.

He had received no overtura from the rival American Federation of Labor, he said, and added that the A. F. of L. was not connected with the present situation in any way.

Retains Counsel

Martin said also he had not conferred with David Dubinsky, president of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union, which with drew from the C. I. O. recently, and "could make no statements" about the possibility of seeing him in the future in regard to co-operating with him and his union.

He came to New York, he said, to obtain legal counsel to fight suits brought in Detroit by the union officers he has suspended. He talked here with Frank P. Walsh, chairman of the New York State Power Authority and labor attorney, and said Walsh and Frank Munholland of Toledo, Ohio, counsel for the Railway Labor Executives, would represent him.

The first court action facing him is a fight against an injunction, obtained by his opponents, which ties up the expenditure of union funds and disposition of any union property. A hearing on this will be held in Detroit Saturday, Martin said.

Kennedy Demands Inquiry Into Nazi Hold on Mexico

Charging that the Cardenas government has become a virtual "dependency of Nazi Germany," Representative Martin J. Kennedy, (Democrat), of New York, yesterday introduced a resolution providing for an investigation of conditions in Mexico touching America rights and the Monroe Doctrine. The inquiry would be made a special cimmittee of seven House members, with a $35,000 fund.

Obviously aimed at the Mexican government's seizure of the $200,000,000 American oil properties and the "barter" deals which has been made since the expropriation for the exchange of oil for German manufactured goods, the Kennedy resolution branded Mexico connections with Germany as "not alone a violation of elementary principles of international law, good will and good faith . . . but in addition . . . a flagrant violation of the Monroe Doctrine."

M St. Fire Victims' Heirs Get $8,000

An $8,000 verdict was returned by a District Court jury yesterday for the deaths of three persons in a fire at 1017 M street January 2, 1936.

The estates of Frederick M. Glines and Florence Bevans, two of the victims, joined Ruth Detrick, who was injured, in suing the Washington Loan & Trust Co., which managed the property for the R. L. Elliott estate. The plaintiffs claimed the building was not equipped with legal fire escapes.

Business Indorses U. S. Travel Bureau

"Whole-hearted support" of the United States Travel Bureau's efforts to stimulate travel in and to this country was voiced yesterday by business and industrial leaders at a conference called by Secretary Ickes to discuss the Federal Government's part in travel promotion.

One of the questions discussed yesterday was the establishment of a United States travel board, the international aspects of a travel program and necessary Federal legislation to put the program into effect.

cal."

Senator Thomas (Democrat), Utah, an Administration supporter, said he thought Amlie was well qualified for a place on the I. C. C.

"He is the scholarly thinker type that I should like to see on all of these commissions," Thomas commented.

Senator Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, said he saw no objection to the President's appointment of Amlie, and would be inclined to support the former Mouse member.

Meanwhile, Representative Thill (Republican), of Wisconsin, wrote Senator Wiley a letter urging him to oppose the appointment.

"I know that his reputation is 'leftist,'" Wiley said, "but I don't know how much so."

Meanwhile, reorganization and expansion of the Interstate Commerce Commission was urged upon the House Interstate Commerce Committee yesterday to ease the multiple load on the 11 commissioners.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Madison, Wis., Jan. 25.—Resolutions adopted by both houses of the Wisconsin Legislature, calling on President Roosevelt to withdraw his nomination of former Representative Thomas R. Amlie, Wisconsin Progressive, to the Interstate Commerce Commission, were severe in their denunciation of Amlie's public record.

The Assembly resolution said Amlie, "in recent years has by his public utterances and other expressions of policy aligned himself with the communist movement in this country. * * *

"Thomas R. Amlie has spent his life as a communistic agitator against everything in the American Government, its Constitution and its laws," that he "is one of that small coterie of Congressional Representatives who joined in a message of sympathy to the Red government of Spain and its murder of thousands of priests, bishops, nuns and members of religious orders,'" and that "the prejudiced attitude of this man to everything held sacred in the minds of American citizens unfits him for membership in any quasi-judicial body."

U. S. Rejects Nazi Bid to Pay Debt in Goods

Hull Note on Austrian Settlement Spurns Reich's Trade Scheme

By the Associated Press.

Germany's argument that she cannot pay Austria's debt to Americans until the United States buys more German goods was disputed yesterday by the State Department.

Secretary Hull, in a note to Berlin dated January 20 and released yesterday, expressed willingness to negotiate with Germany, but declared:

"The Government of the United States has not ceased to protest against the principle . . . that the responsibility of a debtor government for its debts can be made by the debtor to depend on the balance of trade between the debtor country and the country of residence or citizenship of the bondholders."

$64,575,000 Owed U. S.

Austria owed this Government and American investors $64,575,000, but a large part of the private loans had been bought back by Austrians before Germany took over that country.

Germany, by note of January 3 also released yesterday, sought to exclude from consideration $26,000,000, representing relief indebtedness of the former Austrian government to the United States. The American note replied that this Government "perceives no reason why the intergovernmental relief debt should be left out of present consideration."

The Berlin note said Germany "did not have, nor has it now, the intention to discriminate against American creditors as compared with other creditors."

Discrimination Charged

But the American note sharply questioned this point, saying: "This statement must be read in the light of the actual practices of the German government which result in well-known discriminations against American creditors."

Other points made by this country were that Austrian securities were being fully serviced to Austria's absorption into Greater Germany, which took over the sources of revenue pledged to the service of the securities, and that the United States permits payments to citizens of Germany for all types of goods and services "without check or control," and the total of these is many times the amount required to meet the obligations under discussion.

Amount "Not Serious"

The American note said the amount involved, considering the fact that Austrian and German citizens have bought back large percentages of the loans, is not "such as would cause any serious difficulty for the German government."

It dealt the second blow within the last few days at German efforts to expand her trade by tying other enterprises to it. Germany had sought to get the United States and other countries to agree to buy increased German exports in return for allowing Jewish refugees to leave the Reich with a portion of their wealth.

Coroner's Jury Holds Motorman In Crash Death

Garland L. Goble, street car motorman, of the 3500 block of Center street northwest, yesterday was ordered held on charges of negligent homicide by a coroner's jury probing the accident in which George A. Watt, 77, of the 600 block of Maryland avenue southwest, received fatal injuries.

Operated by Goble, a Capital Transit Co. car collided with the automobile operated by Watt January 4 at Fourteenth and Upshur streets northwest.

Mrs. Watt, grief-stricken and still bearing the marks of injuries she received in the crash, testified that her husband had been proceeding moderately and that he had good hearing and eyesight. She was accompanied by a nurse from Emergency Hospital.

Goble testified his car was moving at a normal speed shortly before the crash occurred.

Garner Leads Senate Drive To Slash WPA Supply Bill

Relief

Colorado, chief advocate of the cut and floor manager of the bill, claimed the necessary margin to win.

Garner's back-stage support of the committee plan to reduce the appropriation, but provide for peak relief loads during the severe winter months of February and March, was privately admitted by some sponsors of the bill. At least one important strategy conference was reported to have been held in his office.

Will Defend Harrington

On the Administration side, Senator Barkley was preparing to read two letters to the Senate today replying to charges by Adams and Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, that WPA Administrator Harrington erred by $56,000,000 in his relief estimates, and that Harrington's statement of unobligated WPA balances was at variance with the Treasury's.

Barkley declared one of the letters from Harrington will show he did not make a "mistake" in his estimates, and another from Budget Director Bell will seek to justify the full $875,000,000 appropriation.

Pending before the Senate was the so-called "snow amendment" through which the committee plans to answer charges that the cut would turn more than 1,000,000 relief workers off the rolls in the dead of winter. The amendment forbids a cut of more than 5 per cent in the rolls in February and March, and virtually invites the President to ask for more funds if an emergency develops.

Immediately on disposal of that amendment, Senator McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, who protested the slash in a committee minority report, will attempt to offer his amendment for restoration of the $150,000,000. Adams said his right to do so, in advance of action on all committee amendments, will be challenged.

Loss of two, possibly three votes from the otherwise solid Republican side was indicated at a Senate Republican conference on the issue called yesterday by Senate Minority Leader Charles L. McNary. The only Republicans said to be certain to vote for the increase were Senators Borah, of Idaho, and Frazier, of North Dakota, while Senator Davis, of Pennsylvania, favored restoration with some conditions on the manner in which the sum shouold be spent.

Senators who had been counted for the cut who were either ill yesterday or out of the city included Senators King, of Utah, and Chavez, of New Mexico (Democrats), and Senators Vandenberg, of Michigan; Gibson, of Vermont, and Bridges, of New Hampshire (Republicans).

One advocate of the reduction, Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, charged a vote on the bill was being deliberately delayed by Administration forces.

"A lot of patronage will be spread around," said McCarran.

A lengthy speech on international affairs by Senator Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, sidetracked debate on the bill for four hours, but leaders denied it was a "filibuster." Reynolds, who as yet is not committed for or against the cut, sought time for the speech several days ago. Commenting on the delay, Adams said he thought "some people need more time to convince their erring brethren." Barkley grinned that he "couldn't stop" the Reynolds speech.

One Democratic Senator usually voting with the economy forces, unexpectedly took the floor yesterday to announce he will support restoration of the decrease. Senator Miller (Democrat), of Arkansas, told the Senate he was "as willing as any Senator to economize," but would "not be a party to economizing at the cost of human misery."

Humanitarian Issue

Byrnes and Adams argued their bill was more "humanitarian" than the $875,000,000 plan, since it forbade winter reductions in rolls. When Senator Barbour (Republican), of New Jersey, announced he would support the cut "for humanitarian reason," McKellar told him it would mean the dropping of 67,900 of New Jersey's 103,000 relief workers by June 30. Byrnes hastily rose to deny this. He said relief rolls for the entire country need be reduced below 2,000,000 in June, and State rolls would be reduced proportionately.

to Rock Creek and then started downstream.

Near the Harvard street entrance, Lutra swam into a flock of ducks and went beserk. She dived for a beautiful mallard and killed it.

The resultant clamor, the hysterical quacking of ducks and geese with clipped wings, brought guards on the run. Headkeeper William H. Blackburne and Director William M. Mann also hurried to the scene.

For more than an hour then efforts were made to get the killer out of the water. Nets were thrown across the creek, but Lutra dived under them. Pieces of fish—the otter's favorite food—were tied to string and tossed to her, but she ignored them.

The descending sun wrote Lutra's death warrant. Fearful of what she might do in a night of marauding, Headkeeper Blackburne gave the word, and a guard shot the fugitive. Thus ended in tragedy what well-intentioned people had hoped would be a romance.

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE

Many of those gnawing, nagging, painful backaches people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated in the right way.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Franco Blocks All Roads Out Of Barcelona

Cuts Railway Lines, Shells Last Highway Leading to France

Hendaye, France (at the Spanish Frontier), Jan. 25 (AP).—Shellfire and Spanish insurgent siege lines within the Barcelona metropolitan area were reported tonight to have cut off the last overland escape for hundreds of thousands of refugees and a small force left to cover retreat of the government army.

The insurgents had penetrated Barcelona proper at its southern outskirts. Insurgent siege lines cut across every highway and railway from the erstwhile provisional capital—except the coast road to the northeast, and even that route was under fire of Gen. Franco's guns.

Bomb and shell-shattered buildings in the port section were in flames, and fires licked their way towarded the crowded new city section where most of the refugees were housed.

More than 500 persons had been killed by aerial and artillery bombardments in the past three days.

The only means of communication between Barcelona and the outside world was radio.

Throughout the afternoon a stream of automobiles, trucks, covered gypsy wagons and even garbage trucks rolled through the northeast gate, braving the insurgent barrage on the coast road.

But by nightfall the shelling became so intense the stream trickled away and the insurgent gunners owned the road.

Insurgent airmen mixed their bombs with thousands of leaflets urging Barcelona's last-ditch defenders to surrender "to avoid useless bloodshed."

The Barcelona radio station defiantly broadcast a challenge that the city would be defended "inch by inch, street by street, house by house. The taking of Barcelona will not be an easy matter," the statement concluded.

Advices reaching the French border said only a small covering force of last-ditch defenders remained in Barcelona—along with an estimated 2,000,000 civilians, almost double Barcelona's normal population.

The government's rearguard force, it was supposed from border advices, was sufficient only to fight a delaying action.

Insurgent airmen dropped tons of bombs along the Pyrenees frontier in an effort to cut communications between northeastern government Spain and France. Aerial warfare slopped over the border.

Seventeen bombs were dropped on French soil near Perpignan. They caused little damage.

Ten miles within France a German-made bomber crashed, killing all five of the crew. It had been pierced by bullets, apparently in a government-insurgent air battle.

French anti-aircraft batteries at Cerbere fired two warning rounds at four trespassing insurgent bombing planes.

Insurgent infantrymen already in the suburbs and at the northwestern gates of Barcelona were reported resting on their arms—ordered to wait until Barcelona was completely cut off so that simultaneous entry might be made from the north, west and south.

One hundred inhabitants, suspected of belonging to a "fifth column" of insurgent sympathizers because they refused to dig trenches or fight in defense of the city, were reported to have been shot in the streets.

Insurgent field guns hammered the gates of the city at close range.

While insurgents before Barcelona, estimated at nearly 200,000, maneuvered for a swift occupation of the city, about 100,000 of their comrades to the northwest were making a drive toward the French frontier and the government's new defense line.

The government's new line of resistance was reported to run from the coast, near Arenys de Mar about 25 miles northeast of Barcelona, to the northwest through the hills south of Vich, a communications center, and thence to Solsona where it bent straight north to the French border.

By the United Press.

The Spanish embassy last night denied that Barcelona had fallen into the hands of Gen. Franco's insurgents, and appealed to democratic countries to aid the loyalists cause in an effort to defeat "dictatorships."

The embassy's statement warned that the conflict would not be terminated "until the invaders are thrown out from its soil" and accused Italy and Germany of furnishing an extraordinary amount of aid to the rebels recently in an attempt to prove that the conflict is terminated.

The embassy said it had been in telephonic communication with the loyalist headquarters at Barcelona late yesterday and that it was informed the city was calm and had not been within reach of rebel artillery.

Won't Surrender

"The object of the enormous amount of publicity and propaganda regarding military operations against Barcelona is to stop any action that the democratic countries may take by making them believe that there is no point in modifying the present (neutrality) legislation because 'it is too late,'" the statement said.

"The Spanish people will not surrender just as they have not surrendered before, when there has been a foreign invasion. The government affirms that the republican army is intact and that the Spanish people will continue without weakening their great fight for the liberty of their country and their children, the statement continued.

"The legitimate government of Spain, recognized by the strongest democracies of the world, has found itself dispossessed of the most elementary right of sovereignty: to buy arms for its defense.

"The war in Spain has not finished and will not end until the invaders are thrown out from its soil. Today, as in so many other difficult occasions in this fight against dictatorships, the Spanish democracy, which offers to the world an example of heroism, calls again on the democratic peoples so that she will not be denied that which is indispensable in her fight for liberty.

"Reports from news agencies and correspondents have intimated that the rebels have reached the suburbs of Barcelona which is entirely untrue, according to official information received by telephone from the government of the republic at Barcelona . . ."

insurgent conquest of Barcelona and Catalonia.

Llavaneras is near Caldetas, new refuge of the foreign diplomats, and embarkation point for about 200 United States citizens and other foreigners fleeing from Catalonia.

Rear Admiral Henry E. Lackey, commander of the United States naval forces in the Mediterranean who is aboard the Omaha, said insurgents had been informed of the presence of the foreign warships off the loyalist coast at this point, about 20 miles north of Barcelona on the road to France.

[The Omaha, with 30 American refugees aboard, sailed for Marseille at 8:35 p. m., the Associated Press reported. The Badger left early in the day.—Editor's note.]

The American Embassy staff, including Charge d'Affaires Walter Thurston, remained aboard the Omaha.

Others aboard the Omaha are Col. Henry B. Cheadle and Commander Francis Caldwell, military and naval attaches, and Charles Gilbert and William Kreiger, embassy clerks.

An American businessman, Fred T. Turner, and a representative of the International Telephone & Telegraph Co., also are aboard.

The American consoulate staff, headed by Douglas Flood, remained in Barcelona.

Italy Calls 60,000 Army Reservists

Serves New Warning On France to Keep Troops Out of Spain

By the Associated Press.

Rome, Jan. 25.—Italy started calling up army reservists today for training in modern warfare and voiced a new warning to France against sending troops into Spanish territory.

A "first quota" of 60,000 men of the class of 1901, now 38 years old, was ordered to report for duty February 1. This first contingent represented slightly less than 1 per cent of the estimated 6,700,000 reservists available. How many additional men would be called up was not disclosed.

Army Concentrated

Italians said privately reservists of some other classes, including men born in 1913, also had received a summons for eventual training service. In political circles there was an unconfirmed report that a heavy force of the regular standing army had been concentrated near Genoa, ready to embark for Spain if France intervened in the civil war.

Fascists charged France and Soviet Russia were sending arms, munitions and other aid to government Spain.

An article in Informazione Diplomatica, bulletin of the Foreign Office, repeated a previous Italian threat to back Spanish insurgents with more of Italy's armed might if France intervened to save Barcelona. The article was believed to have been written by Premier Mussolini himself.

France Is Warned

The authoritative Fascist editor, Virginio Gayda, indicated the warning applied specifically to any French occupation of Spanish Morocco or Minorca. France has been reported considering such occupation to protect her Mediterranean ship lanes and her North African territory.

French have indicated alarm which Italians officialy call excessive at having Italians and Spanish insurgents on her frontiers. They have feared Mussolini would keep a permanent air and naval base in the Balearics despite repeated statements by Insurgent Gen. Franco that no Spanish territory would be turned over to foreign control.

Doubled Defenses Urged on Canada

Ottawa, Jan. 25 (Canadian Press).—Defense estimates of $63,447,175, highest since the World War and nearly double those of last year, were introduced in the Canadian House of Commons today.

This year's money will be applied principally to the acquisition of aircraft, increase of personnel, construction of buildings, and purchase of arms, equipment and another warship.

The government will ask $350,000 for transportation expenses in connection with the visit of King George and Queen Elizabeth this spring.

France Doubles Speed of Plans For Mobilizing

Calling of Reservists By Italy Renews Concern Over Mediterranean

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Jan. 25.—The French general staff has nearly doubled the speed of the nation's wartime mobilization system to be prepared against any possible lightning attack, it was learned tonight.

This and various other precautionary measures have been taken in view of widely-expressed concern lest the Mediterranean situation suddenly come to a head upon the fall of Barcelona.

The calling up of 60,000 reservists for instruction in Italy added to the concern expressed by officials and press alike. Explanations from Rome that only a relatively small number were called, and that there was nothing abnormal in the order, failed to dispel anxiety.

Nervousness concerning the situation has been manifest also on the stock exchange, where French government bonds have fallen heavily during the last month.

Faced with the possibility of renewed Italian Mediterranean demands, the nation's military leaders were said by informed sources to have evolved a system to cut down not only the time required for military mobilization but also for mobilization of all industrial facilities.

It was learned that Gen. Maurice Gustave Gamelin, chief of staff, had canceled a projected tour of North Africa and was remaining with the supreme war council. Vice Admiral Jean Darlan, chief of the naval staff, who was to have been accompanied by Gamelin, sails tomorrow from Toulon. The French fleet now is maneuvering off the African coast.

Preparations have been pushed throughout French territory bordering on the Mediterranean to meet any eventuality which might come from demands for slices of France's colonial empire.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

Errol Flynn Does Some Panting About His Pants!

Missent Baggage Causes Horse Show Star Concern; George Brent Arrives in Captital Today; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

It was a hectic hour or two that Errol Flynn put in in Washington after his arrival here yesterday evening to participate in the horse show put on by Col. Patton, at Fort Myer, Va. The President and Mrs. Roosevelt were in attendance and Mr. Flynn's predicament was a bit acute.

BELL

Having missed his first train, and arriving in the Capital something like an hour after he was expected—through no fault of his own—the star of "Captain Blood," "The Charge of the Light Brigade," "Green Light," "The Adventures of Robin Hood," "The Dawn Patrol" and goodness only knows how many other pictures of the first rank, charged through a phalanx of admirng "fans" at Union Station and reached the Carlton Hotel at about 7 o'clock. Then he encountered the usual difficulties of a man of eminence trying to keep an important date. His baggage had been hopelessly jumbled. That is to say it was distributed, for no known reason, among half a dozen of Washington's leading hostelries.

The bag that arrived at the Carlton was the one that contained his riding boots—Mr. Flynn rode in the horse show last night, as everybody must know by now—but among its contents was no vestige of his favorite riding breeches. It was at this juncture that Maj. Milholland stepped in and took the emergency more or less in hand. There are, it seems, a considerable number of riding officers at Fort Myer who adhere, more or less, to Mr. Flynn's physical measurements—6 feet 2 inches tall, 33-inch waist and all that sort of thing. Mr. Flynn consequently was equipped with riding breeches that suited him down to the McClellan saddle and the top deck of the horse and looked as if they might have been tailored for him.

He was presented with a handsome trophy for his handling of the best horse in the Presidential stables, by Mrs. Roosevelt. It was quite a night for Mr. Flynn—and for the horse show—despite the early anxiety undergone by the motion picture star as to what he was going to do about pants. Pants seem to be something that take care of themselves—and of Mr. Flynn.

The Postman Still Remains Faithful

That postman still is faithful, as witness the following letter just to hand: "Dear Mr. Bell: In view of the great acclaim given Ethel Waters by the New York critics for her performance in 'Mamba's Daughters', I should like very much to have you see the play in the event you come to New York. Please telephone this office for seats. I am sure you will enjoy it. With best wishes, (Signed) GUTHRIE McCLINTIC." We are inclined to agree with Mr. McClintic in the matter of prospective enjoyment. There have been few, if any, of his productions that we have not enjoyed. And Ethel Waters is an artist in whose activities we always have taken a keen interest. Known first as a signing comedienne, she now breaks out as a dramatic actress of great capabilities, just as many of us have been sure that some time she would. When, as and if we ever get to New York—what with Presidential Birthday Celebrations and all—"Mamba's Daughters" will be one of the first things we will be headed for. And, as I have said numerous times before, never use a preposition to end a sentence with!

Speaking of Errol Flynn, as we were back there a block or two, reminds me that George Brent, popular Warner Brothers' star, coming here for the President's Birthday Celebration, will arrive at Union Station this morning at 8:50 a. m.

This evening, Brent will attend the private presentation, honoring the United States Navy, of "Wings of the Navy," new Warner Brothers production in which he has the leading role. The photoplay will be screened in the auditorium, Department of Interior, on Constitution avenue.

Special guests at this presentation will include the Attorney General, Hon. Frank Murphy; Senator David I. Walsh, chairman of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee; Representative Carl Vinson, chairman of the House Naval Affairs Committee; the Assistant Secretary of the Navy, the Hon. Charles Edison; the Assistant Secretary of State, the Hon. George S. Messersmith; the Assistant Secretary of the Interior, the Hon. E. K. Burlew; Rear Admiral Charles Conrad, Rear Admiral J. R. Defrees, Rear Admiral W. G. DuBose, Rear Admiral A. P. Fairfield, Rear Admiral John Downs, Rear Admiral T. C. Hart, Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, Rear Admiral E. S. Marquart, Rear Admiral George Pettingill, Rear Admiral A. C. Pickens, Rear Admiral J. O. Richardson, Rear Admiral F. H. Sadler, Rear Admiral R. R. Waesche, Rear Admiral Church and a number of members of the Senate, the House of Representatives and other ranking naval officers.

"Wings of the Navy" will have its world premiere at Warner Brothers' Earle Theater here on Friday, February 3. Made on location at the Naval Air Base at Pensacola, Fla., and the base at North Island, San Diego, Calif., this new picture is said to reveal a dramatic picture of the Navy's air defenses. Scenes of special flight formations, never before photographed, are included in the picture, which presents—in addition to George Brent, Olivia de Havilland, John Payne, Frank McHugh and a talented supporting cast.

Joe Cook Tackles Comedy, Sans Music

So word filters through to this department that Joe Cook, famous comedian of the musical stage, is about to launch himself on a departure from usual procedure. A week from tonight, in New Haven, Conn., Mr. Cook will project himself in a straight comedy without music—an almost incomprehensible thing to those who have followed him through the years since he was the "one-man vaudeville show" on the two-a-day. The title of my fellow-Hoosier's new vehicle—Joe hails from Evansville, in the south end of the State, while I come from Valparaiso, in the north—is "Off to Buffalo." The fact that it has no music is astonishing, especially since it ought to have enough to permit Joe to execute that simple dance step that allies itself so inseparably with the title!

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studios yesterday announced that they're sending two of their most popular female stars to Washington to participate in the local celebrations of the President's Birthday next Monday night.

From production chief Louis B. Mayer, Carter Barron, of Loew's, received word that Luise Rainer, two-time Academy Award winner, and Eleanor Powell, "Queen of taps," who is also a "two-timer" having been a guest here last year, have accepted the invitation of the local entertainment committee chairmaned by this column.

two-time winner of the Academy's Award for the best feminine acting on the screen, who will be present in Washington for the President's Birthday Celebrations next Monday night. The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Jan. 25.

THE DEFENSE in the Hines case will charge that a New York jurist visited the 161st street jail and assured racket leaders incarcerated there that their sentences would be reduced if they'd testify against Hines . . . Augustin Smith, secretary of the runaway Grand Jury in New York, will be called as a witness—to testify that some of the jurors had recommended Harold Corbin as special prosecutor before Dewey was appointed . . . In the event that George M. Cohan decides to retire from portraying the President in "I'd Rather Be Right," Jimmy Walker may replace him. The suggestion and the negotiations were made yesterday . . . Cole Porter threw away his wheelchair and crutches last night because he's so improved.

A MUNICIPAL official last week confided to Mayor LaGuardia that he had dreamed of a Fifth avenue shop which was advertising men's suits for $8.14 . . . "So the next day," he confessed, "I bought a policy slip and played number 814, but the hunch didn't work. Number 830 came up" . . . "Serves you right," the Mayor reminded, "for not tacking on the 16-cent sales tax."

CAPT. PODERJAY, who will be released from Auburn Prison next year after serving time for a bigamous marriage with Agnes Tufverson—whose unsolved disappearance is New York's perfect crime—is telling his inmate friends that Miss Tufverson is in India and that he'll join her there as soon as he's released . . . Sam Harris said that if "The American Way" had not received good reviews from the critics, he'd never produce another "spectacle" again . . . Kaufman & Hart were retouching some of the scenes last night. The show was a sellout Monday and played to standees . . . The former Mrs. Leopold Stokowski has returned to town quietly and is exhibiting her groom prince to New Yorkers.

JOE JACOBS, in escorting his charge, Tony Galento, to the Broadway cafes, assured all listeners in each cafe that Galento was the most powerful man in the ring . . . "He'll kill that Joe Louis; he's so strong," Jacobs proclaimed . . . When the waiter presented the check, Jacobs drew a bankroll from his pocket and started to pay . . . Galento spied the wad of bills, grabbed for it, and almost got it—but Joe struggled and finally succeeded in taking the money from Tony . . . "He's still the strongest man in the world," Joe gasped, "except when it comes to my money."

ERROL FLYNN, Bruce Cabot, Woolworth Donohue, Franchot Tone and Proprietor John Perona sat at one table in El Morocco the other night. A debutante entered, pointed to the table, and told her escort: "Look—there's John Perona" . . . George Jessel will appear at Jack Lynch's in Philadelphia February 1 for $2,500 a week—a new record for cafe talent there . . . Woolcott Gibbs sent a review of Max Eastman's "Enjoyment of Laughter" to the New York magazine. The review read: "Max Eastman has American Humor down—and has broken its arm."

THE CHICAGO TIMES flayed Elsa Maxwell because of her refusal to do a series of broadcasts from Chicago for $2,000 a week. Acceptance would have required her living in Chicago. Miss Maxwell denied the Story . . . If Elsa needs reminding, she told that story of the cocktail party tendered by Alfred de Laigre, jr., in honor of Grace Moore. She told it the day before it was published here . . . Wendy Hiller, star of "Pygmalion," is complaining because her photo in the current "Pic" makes her look exactly like Floyd Gibbons . . . J. Edgar Hoover's G-Men henceforth will have a doctor examine all their prisoners every 24 hours.

ONE OF THE MAIDS at the Algonquin finally has induced Frank Case to shift her to another wing of the hotel . . . Every day for the last few weeks the maid has been working conscientiously, tapping on the door before entering and shouting the warning: "Maid" . . . She asked to be shifted because whenever she'd come to clean up Jim Thurber's room, the wild-eyed cartoonist responded to her warning call, "Maid," with a counter identification: "Tenant."

JACK DEMPSEY is lamenting the ill fortune which seems to hound his outside ventures. For years he's been maintaining a ranch at San Joaquin Valley in California—and recently decided to ease the tax burden by selling it. He sold it for $15,000. Three weeks later the new owner struck oil on the premises.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Jan. 25.—Roger Marchetti, friend of the stars for years, is just back from Washington, where he's been trying to get through an amendment on income tax for our picture people. According to Marchetti, the stars should have the same consideration an oil well or a mine gets, and they automatically slice off 28½ per cent for depreciation, or what you might call wear and tear.

HEDDA HOPPER

I think you will admit there's nothing more harzardous or risky than a screen career, and our stars wouldn't mind being compared to an oil well, if they got the same consideration, for in many cases their years of production don't equal a well's.

These figures appalled me:

Income.	Tax.	Net Income.
$50,000	$12,000	$38,000
100,000	41,000	59,000
200,000	117,000	83,000
400,000	286,000	114,000

Look over the list of last year's stars who have disappeared and I think you'll know what I mean!

Take the case of the recent bull market in horror pictures. The latest "Frankenstein" has been an absolute lifesaver to Bela Lugosi. Fine actor who came here years ago and his first assignment was one of those blood curdling spine twisters. Lugosi was sitting on top of the heap when suddenly those things went out with the flapper. Why, he went down like a thermometer at the North Pole and couldn't get a day's work and had to apply to the Motion Picture Relief Fund when his baby was born. But now that's all changed; Universal has handed him a five-year ticket. That's Hollywood for you—chicken one day and bones the next.

Director Arthur Lubin while looking for a hobo camp location for his picture, "Young Victory," happened upon the one at Laguna, which calls itself "The Intelligensia Idlers of America." He'd like to have set up his camera there but the ringleader said, "Oh, films don't interest us." And went right on reading a good book.

Nora Lane was doing o. k. at Fox in "The Cisco Kid" and "Dance Team" a few years back. Well, that was before she decided to marry her business manager, whom she's just subtracted at Reno. Now she's resumed her career. Nora hopes, but doesn't expect, producers to flutter contracts in her face, so she's accepted a comercial picture having to do with the San Francisco World's Fair.

What a shock I got when I took my antique silver kettle to have its handle tightened. For sale at the shop was the most beautiful silver tea service I've ever seen at a fraction of its worth. The silversmith told me it was being sold by one of our biggest stars, who's lost more than $100,000 on the races the past six months. And she is selling her personal effects, so she can keep on trying to hit one on the nose. You'd swoon if you knew her name. I've always considered her one of the most sensible girls in town. Guess they're right when they tell us gambling is a disease.

The other day at the producer's luncheon for Jimmy Roosevelt, who is now head of Sam Goldwyn's cabinet, "Jeffsie" O'Connor started off the proceedings by saying he was about to present the man who headed the greatest motion picture studio in the world. As Jeffsie neared the close of his flowery effort, both Louis Mayer and Sam Goldwyn started to get to their feet, but it seems Jeffsie was referring to Jack Warner.

I wonder if Papa Louis remembers when he first met Jimmy, who was out here campaigning for his father's nomination. Hate the personal pronoun, but I made the introduction. And Mr. Mayer said, "Young man, I admire your father tremendously, and I'll back him for everything I've got at my command, except—the Presidency of the United States."

Our British contingent has practically denied its dignity trying to capture Noel Coward as a house guest. The last time he was here he parked with Ruth Chatterton. This year Cary Grant has captured him. I don't know what element is trying to run Noel for Parliament, but the present members will be mighty surprised if he makes it. But we're all looking forward to seeing him. What a grand guy!

'Outward Bound' Due To Open Here Sunday

Performance at National Theater To Aid Paralysis Fight; Philosophical Play Tops Week's Entertainment Bill

For one performance only, "Outward Bound," the current New York success, will be performed by its all-star cast at the National Theater on Sunday evening at 8 o'clock as part of the President's Birthday celebrations, on behalf of the drive for the prevention of infantile paralysis. Laurette Taylor, Florence Reed, Helen Chandler, Bramwell Fletcher, Thomas Chalmers, Vincent Price, Louis Hector and Morgan Farley are the stars of the philosophical play which, in its revival after 17 years, has won the firm approval of the New York press and public.

This morning sees the opening at Loew's Palace Theater of "Jesse James," the Technicolor film biography of the famous character of the Ozarks. Tyrone Power, Henry Fonda, Nancy Kelly and Randolph Scott are in the cast which King Henry directed with the idea of displaying the notorious bandit "as a God-fearing man who carried a Bible, prayed for guidance and never drew for his six-shooter except in self-defense." Much of the film was photographed in Missouri. Short subjects include a Pete Smith specialty, "Penny's Picnic;" a Betty Boop cartoon, "My Friend the Monkey," and the latest "News of the Day."

John Garfield is to be seen in his first screen appearance since "Four Daughters" at the Earle Theater tomorrow. "They Made Me a Criminal" is the title of this Warner Brothers' film, which deals with a young prize fighter suspected of murder and unable to prove his innocence. The "Dead End" kids, Claude Rains, Gloria Dickson, Ann Sheridan and May Robson are in the cast. On the stage, the Earle will present Lionel Stander, the popular screen comedian of "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," "The Scoundrel" and many more films. Emmet Oldfield and company; the Randall Sisters; Philips and Kohl and the 16 Earle Roxyettes are others who will take part in the stage proceedings. A midnight performance for the aid of the President's birthday celebrations will be given Monday night in which the Earle and Capitol stage shows and appearances of the visiting film stars will be the attractions.

"Thanks for Everything," with Jack Haley, is the new film at the Capitol Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. Adolphe Menjou is a smart promoter who has discovered the perfect barometer of the tastes and habits of the men of America, a million dollar discovery which reaches its peak when Haley, as Mr. Average Man, is questioned about war. Jack Oakie Arleen Whalen, Tony Martin and Binnie Barnes are in Director William A. Seiter's cast. "Snapshots of 1939" is the Capitol's stage show which will be headed by Roscoe Ates, the screen's stuttering comic. Other acts include the appearance of the Rhythm Rockets, precision dancers replacing the Capitol Comets; The Juvelys, a Continental balancing act and Sonny Conklin and Sonny Thomas, winners of the intercollegiate shag contest, demonstrating their jittery specialties. On Monday night the Capitol will offer a midnight stage show for the President's birthday celebration made up of its own stage performers, those of the Earle Theater and appearances of the visiting film stars.

"The Lady Vanishes," a master mystery from the directorial hand of Alfred Hitchcock, a man who never falters in such matters, is the new attraction at RKO-Keith's Theater, beginning Saturday. Noted in New York as one of the surprise films of the year, it tells the engrossing tale Alexander Woollcott used to tell about the lady on the railway carriage who disappeared so completely that some even doubted that she had even been there at all. Dame May Whitty, Paul Lukas, Margaret Lockwood and Michael Redgrove are featured.

Pat O'Brien and Joan Blondell come to the Metropolitan Theater tomorrow in "Off the Record." In this comedy-drama the two stars are rival reporters on the same newspaper, seeking to expose a gambling racket. Bobby Jordan, Alan Baxter, William Davidson and Morgan Conway are in the cast, which was directed by James Flood. Newsreels and selected short subjects round out the program.

"The Cowboy and The Lady," with Gary Cooper as the cowboy and Merle Oberon as the lady, returns to F street, the Columbia Theater in particular, tomorrow morning. A stream-lined socialite causes eye-brow-lifting when he marries the man from the lone prairie. Patsy Kelly, Walter Brennan, Mabel Todd and Fuzzy Knight also take part in this adventure, part of which is laid in a Florida estate, where Miss Oberon pretends to be her own lady's maid and fall back on some tricky ruses to get her man.

A split week is in the offing for the Little Theater, where on Sunday George Arliss will return to a local screen in "The House of Rothschild," the tale of war, intrigue and racial persecution in the Germany of the Napoleonic Era. On Wednesday "Ballerina" will make its Washington bow, with a Tuesday night preview, relating the story of the ballet dancers of the Paris Opera in their own setting, that of the famous opera house itself.

Depicting a combat between a huge vulture and a museum-seeking scientist, "King Vulture," filmed high in the Sierras, is the top short at the Trans-Lux for the week commencing tomorrow. "Plant Power," showing through the means of lapse photography plants actually growing; "Hawaiian Holiday," a Walt Disney cartoon and a travelogue on war-striken China and Siam are the other shorts on the bill at the home of the newsreel.

"Peter Pan" will be the offering of the Children's Theater at the National Theater on Saturday morning. Clare Tree Major is the director of the Barrie classic, which is on a coast to coast tour. The production has been used as a basis for Walt Disney's impending full-length feature film of the little boy who didn't want to grow up and his adventures in the Never-Never Land.

Text of Conboy's Statement Supporting Embargo on Arms for Spain

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Jan. 25.—Following is the text of a statement by Martin Conboy, New York attorney and prominent Catholic layman, opposing the lifting by the President of the embargo against the sale of arms and munitions to the Spanish loyalist government, in reply to a previous statement by Henry L. Stimson, former Secretary of War and State:

Mr. Henry L. Stimson presents his views "concerning the present situation in Spain and the duties of our own Government and people toward that situation."

He adds that "the basic reasons which govern my views consist of simple and long-standing principles of American international conduct," and he advocates the lifting of the embargo on arms to Spain by Presidential proclamation.

My own view of the matter differs in that I consider the American reason for keeping the Spanish embargo is that it conforms to our national neutrality policy and further that irrespective of whether it should or should not be maintained, the embargo can only be removed by the repeal by Congress of a joint resolution of Congress adopted on January 8, 1937.

An Old-Established Policy

The neutrality policy of this country was established when the United States were formed as a separate nation. The policy was declared by the first President of the United States. It was enacted in one of the first laws adopted by the Congress of the United States. The policy has never been narrowed. Whenever there have been any modifications of it they have all been by way of enlargement to make it more effective.

The policy has been extended to include the prohibition of the sale of arms and munitions of war. Coming to recent instances, the neutrality law, passed August 31, 1935, made the export of arms, ammunitions and implements of war from the United States to any belligerent state unlawful whenever the President found that there existed a state of war between two foreign states. Within a month after this enactment the Italian attack on Ethiopia began. On October 5, 1935, President Roosevelt issued two proclamations, one forbidding shipments of munitions to the belligerants, the other giving notice that American citizens could travel on belligerent ships only at their own risk.

When civil war broke out in Spain, July, 1936, the President had no authority to lay an embargo on the exportation of munitions and implements of war to Spain for the use of either side because the then existing neutrality legislation did not apply to a condition of civil war.

1936 Statement Quoted

Nevertheless, the established policy of the United States was opposed to such traffic, and accordingly on August 7, 1936, the Assistant Secretary of State informed all American consular representatives in Spain that "In conformity with its well-established policy of non-interference with internal affairs in other countries, either in time of peace or in the event of civil strife, this Government will, of course, scrupulously refrain from any interference whatsoever in the unfortunate Spanish situation."

No licenses were issued by the Federal Munitions Control Board and none, in fact, was sought, until December, 1936. Then an American company applied for a license to export airplanes and engines to the loyalist government of Spain. The board, which had refused licenses for the exportation of arms and munitions to Italy and Ethiopia during the war between those countries, was without authority in law to refuse licenses to ship such articles to Spain.

The editor of the British Year Book of International Law, 1937, commenting upon this situation, says:

"With evident regret, therefore, the board felt obliged to issue the licenses in the present case, and it did so. The President publicly expressed his disapproval of the action of the Curtiss Co. in refusing to comply with the Government's nonintervention policy, although he admitted that the company was within its legal rights in shipping the airplanes and engines to the Spanish government. At the same time he caused the various governments of Europe most directly concerned to be informed of his sincere regrets and of the intention of the Government of the United States to continue to pursue a policy of strict neutrality in the present civil war."

The President publicly characterized as "unpatriotic" such shipments as had been made and deprecated "the unfortunate noncompliance by an American citizen with this Government's strict nonintervention policy."

Thereupon, on January 8, 1937, Congress passed a joint resolution. This is a special act to stop the exportation of arms and munitions to Spain. It is founded on the well-established policy of the United States which had been violated by the shipments made before there was any statute prohibiting them. It reads:

"That during the existence of the state of civil strife now obtaining in Spain it shall from and after the approval of this resolution, be unlawful to export arms, ammunition or implements of war from any place in the United States to Spain or to any other foreign country for transshipment to Spain or for use of either of the opposing forces in Spain."

Roosevelt's Power

The embargo specifically laid by this resolution can be lifted only upon proclamation by the President that the state of war has ceased to exist.

The next step in the expression by Congress of our well-established principle of neutrality was the writing into our neutrality statute by joint resolution adopted May 1, 1937, of a general provision relating to civil strife in any foreign country. The President was thereby authorized to establish an embargo by proclamation upon a finding by him that a state of civil strife existed in such country and "that such civil strife is of a magnitude or is being conducted under such conditions that the export of arms, ammunition or implements of war from the United States to such foreign state would threaten or endanger the peace of the United States."

Upon the same day the President, acting under the authority of that joint resolution, issued a proclamation with relation to Spain admonishing all citizens and residents of the United States to abstain from the exportation of arms, ammunitions, or implements of war from any place in the United States to Spain or to any other state for transportation to, or for the use of Spain under the penalties provided for in this statute. This proclamation had no effect upon the embargo existing under the joint resolution of January 8, 1937, except to permit the President to invoke certain administrative powers given him by the later resolution which had not been contained in the earlier one.

Mr. Stimson, in his letter to the Times, refers to the joint resolution of January 8 as a "temporary resolution" which he says "was superseded" by that of May 1. Upon that assumption he continues by saying that "the embargo imposed under the resolution of May 1, 1937, should be at once lifted by the President. By its terms I believe he has the power to take such action." But Mr. Stimson ignores the fact that the President has not the power to lift the embargo which was imposed by Congress in its joint resolution of January 8, 1937, until the state of civil strife has ceased in Spain.

Secretary of State Hull, undoubtedly with the advice of the eminent legal staff in his office and probably also under the advice of the Department of Justice, wrote, on March 21, 1938, to the president of the Foreign Policy Association, New York, the following:

"It is manifest that the state of civil strife in Spain described in the joint resolution of Congress of January 8, 1937, has not ceased to exist. Accordingly, even if the proclamation of the President of May 1, 1937, were to be revoked (lifting the embargo under the general resolution of that day), the prohibition upon the export of arms, ammunition and implements of war to Spain laid down in the joint resolution of Congress approved January 8, 1937, would still remain in effect.

Earlier Statute Stands

This conclusion necessarily follows from the well-settled rule of statutory construction that, when there are two statutes upon the same subject, the earlier being special and the latter general, the special statute remains in force in the absence of an express repeal or absolute incompatibility.

Mr. Stimson stresses what he claims to be the duty of this country toward "the recognized government of Spain." In his argument based thereon he ignores the purpose of our neutrality policy, which is to keep us out of European disputes. It does not make the slightest difference whether the situation is a state of war between two nations or a state of civil war, where aiding, by supplying arms to either or both parties to the war, will be productive of danger to our peace.

There is a condition of civil war in Spain. After two years of fighting, the insurgents are in control of 35 of the 50 provinces in Spain and more than half of the population of the country is within the territory they control. Sympathy with one side or the other has no more to do with the invocation and applicability of our policy than would sympathy as between two warring nations. When two nations are involved in war, it makes no difference, so far as our policy is concerned, whether we sympathize with one or the other. Our neutrality policy is to assist neither.

An Old Story

This is not the first time the United States has been urged to adapt its neutrality policy to the preference of some of our citizens for one or other of foreign combatants. Washington had to face exactly that difficulty. France had been on our side in the Revolution. France, at war with England afterward, presumed upon that friendship by acts inconsistent with our neutrality. And Washington refused to have our policy of neutrality so invaded.

So, likewise, when a condition of civil strife exists, our established policy of neutrality is equally applicable. The converse of neutrality is assistance to one or another of the belligerent parties. In short, the change demanded by those who favor the lifting of the present embargo under the circumstances would mean an affirmative act of aid and assistance in favor of one of the belligerent parties as against the other.

In the present instance, insistence upon maintenance of the integrity of our well-established policy of neutrality and upon the President when he said he found a condition that would threaten and endanger the peace of the United States if we sent arms to Spain meant just what he said.

There is no need for doubt on that point.

There were present all the elements necessary to "threaten and endanger the peace of the United States" sooner or later, and to threaten and endanger it not in relation to Spain alone but to the much more potent forces that have transformed all Europe into armed camps.

So far as the United States could go to avoid being drawn into danger by acts of its own, Congress and the President would be bound to go, and the people of the United States resolutely desired them to go.

If we were to seek evidence that the precautions then taken were well advised, we have only to recall the bare outlines of what has happened since. A Norwegian ship had been sunk in December, 1936, a French ship bombed in January, 1937; three British ships in February, and two French ships in March. The bombing of French and British ships in the harbors of Barcelona and Valencia has been a frequent feature of the news during the past two years.

We in the United States can be well content to have no immediate interest in such news. Nor can we limit this consideration to the civil strife in Spain as a separate entity. We must recall that week in September last, when peace and war hung in the balance, and when the frontier between France and Spain was plainly marked as one of the battle grounds included in the plans of the two great rival forces that from hour to hour seemed likely to be engaged in a conflict by which European civilization would have been destroyed.

The threat of a general war has not yet passed, and yet, with that danger threatening us, with the prospect that the utmost exertion may be required to maintain the security of the United States in the midst of a toppling civilization, there are those who, seriously and with unaccountable insistence, demand that our well established policy shall now be reversed.

It is demanded that legislation designed to keep this Nation at peace shall be replaced by legislation that would lead to our again being trapped into war.

In my humble judgment, the people of the United States will have none of it.

Conditions that "would threaten and endanger the peace of the United States" are not to be lightly passed over, even if the desire of those who seek the change is to improve the chances of one of the contending elements in the Spanish strife.

Our preferences, either as to Spain or as to the world at large, may be as the poles apart, but when it comes to endangering deliberately the peace of the United States over the quarrels of other peoples, the solid good sense of the American people is certain to prevail.

Yours truly, MARTIN CONBOY.

Belasco

"BEETHOVEN CONCERTO." Belgoskino picturisation of a story by B. R. Pakor, distributed by Amkino, with Vladimir Gardin, A. Weinkkop, M. Taimanov, V. Vasiliev, A. Larikov and K. Elinsberg. Directed by V. Schmidthof and M. Gavronsky. Reviewed Wednesday afternoon. At the Belasco Theater.

"Beethoven Concerto," the new film which opened yesterday at the Belasco Theater, is an unexpectedly charming adventure with children. While its humor is of an obvious and naturally even childish nature, the film is pleasant and quietly appealing.

For the Leningrad studios to slip out a chuckle after the thunderbolts that have rumbled from "Chapeyev," "Potemkin" and "Professor Mamlock," is a diversion. When one recalls the elaborate song sequences of some of the more "Continental" or American films, the episode of the youngsters on the far-from-luxurious train, rehearsing their instruments for the great contest at Moscow is an enlivening one.

Yanka and Vladik are violin students of Yanka's father, Prof. Malevich. For 12-year-olds they enjoy the usual sprawling life. They each have dogs, friends of their own age and are beset with the inherent desires for romping about that boys of such an age have. The professor disapproves of Vladik's high spirits for they keep Yanka from his practice and when a great contest is announced for all the republics, the father's tinge of jealousy over his pupil's superiority asserts itself. He dismisses him and determines to concentrate on Yanka. He has written a cadenza which he will teach his son for the "Beethoven Concerto" contest. When the neglected Vladik tosses it over a railroad bridge onto a locomotive, things look as black as the smoke from its funnel.

When they attempt to recover the manuscript, Vladik recalls that the whistle was a B flat and, nothing daunted, the children of the neighborhood are off to the yards ultimately to discover a locomotive with a B flat whistle. Top that, Hollywood, for production ingenuity! Vladik has written his own cadenza, but when they finally arrive for the contests the judges find him unprepared to play with an orchestra and his chum wins the contest, but by playing the boy's cadenza. In a more usual type film it all amounts to a touchdown in the last ten seconds of play.

While it is a musical in form, the settings are thoroughly and characteristically simple. The train is an affair not seen around our round-houses today and the children have a gala time tuning up their instruments and staying in practice for the contest, a contest quite unlike any in Wagner's Hall of Song. The camera work is not so good as some of the Soviet films have been, although the children are refreshingly natural and somewhat reminiscent of those in "Generals Without Buttons." To go back to the train for the last time, there is an amusing bit of humor in someone's cartoon work for that scene.

As the two boys, M. Taimanov and V. Vasiliev are memorable figures. The other children all have that precocity which the very young and the very old display before a camera.

"Winter Wonderland" is a short created by the Forest Service of the Agriculture Department to tell New York World's Fair visitors next spring about the skiing delights that lie in wait for them at our own National parks. "Old Danish Sugar Bowl" tells of life in St. Croix, the Virgin Islands. A Pathe Parade and a color cartoon complete the surrounding program of the diverting feature.

A Broader Base

The election of Dr. Cameron C. Garman to replace W. C. Kirkpatrick as president of the Group Health Association is not expected to foreshadow any radical changes in the nature and functions of that co-operative health movement among Government workers. It does emphasize, however, the changing membership of GHA.

At the outset, GHA was almost wholly identified with the Home Owners Loan Corporation. Its original membership consisted of employes of that agency, which with questionable propriety advanced funds for organization and preliminary operating expenses. Not surprisingly, the president and the great majority of board members and officers of GHA came at the outset from HOLC ranks.

Lately, however, the GHA membership has been broadened to include employes from other Government agencies and departments. This change has now been reflected by the election to the presidency of GHA of a man who is assistant deputy commissioner of the Farm Credit Administration. The new vice president comes from the Department of Agriculture and the new secretary from the Civil Service Commission.

Since it came into being in November, 1937, the GHA has passed through trying times. Undoubtedly it suffered, as any new organization is bound to, from errors of omission and commission. But the vitality of its underlying idea is manifest in the indications that the trials and tribulations through which it has passed have made it potentially stronger than ever before.

Today GHA faces competition from the plan approved by the membership of the District Medical Society, which seeks to provide low-cost health service without destroying the existing relationship between doctor and patient. Which of these plans will prove more socially desirable or more efficient in operation only time can tell.

There is undoubtedly room for both types. At any rate no harm and a great deal of good may result from the friendly competition of the GHA and the District Medical Society plans. The fact that they differ radically in their approach to the problem of low-cost medical care need not be a deterrent. It should, on the contrary, be a real incentive to progress in a field where tangible progress is obviously long overdue.

Union Disintegration

The struggle for control of the United Automobile Workers Union has added another chapter to the story of progressive disintegration in the organized labor movement.

Repudiation of Homer Martin, president of the U. A. W., by the C. I. O. destroys any slight hope that the warring factions in the automobile union will be able to compose their differences sufficiently to present a united front to the world and, more important, to management. It now seems highly probable that at least two industrial unions will compete for recognition in the automobile field. And organizers for the A. F. of L. may also be encouraged to enter the contest against a weakened opposition.

The outcome of the campaign against Homer Martin will no doubt be welcomed by the Communist elements which have been working so hard to dominate the automobile workers union. For nothing is more gratifying to an enemy of the existing order than to witness the breakdown of that responsible kind of unionism which seeks to fulfill the terms of contracts negotiated with employers. The uprising against Mr. Martin has already provided the Ford Co. with a wholly reasonable argument for refusing to confer with labor organizers belonging to either faction. Moreover, if the breach remains open, automobile companies that now have contracts with the unions may find their value seriously impaired and the incentive to renew existing agreements destroyed.

Due to the split between A. F. of L. and C. I. O., the task of the National Labor Relations Board has been rendered extraordinarily difficult. The decision of issues arising out of this split has, indeed, according to the board's own statement, "absorbed a disproportionate part" of its time and energies. Benefits which organized labor might have enjoyed under the Wagner labor relations act, given united leadership, have been forfeited as the result of internecine quarrels.

Now, instead of a long-hoped for rapprochement between the two major factions, dissatisfied groups are breaking away from the C. I. O. to form a third fighting unit, thereby providing even more distracting problems for the consideration of the harassed NLRB.

On the heels of the elimination of Dr. Hjalmar Schacht as president of the Reichsbank has come Hitler's action in enlarging the powers of the S. A., the volunteer Nazi organization which has been somewhat in eclipse since the famous "purge" of June 30, 1934.

Behind the facade of monolithic unity, an unending evolutionary process seeks to operate in the Third Reich as, for that matter, in all other dictatorships. This struggle has many aspects. But the most fundamental is that between the elements favoring relatively conservative policies and those which support a radical orientation.

This struggle within the Nazi movement began at the outset of the Hitler regime. It has continued to this day. The early triumph of the conservative elements was signalized by the power accorded Dr. Schacht as the financial and economic dictator of the Third Reich. It was also demonstrated when the Reichswehr resisted the efforts of S. A. leaders, such as Ernst Roehm, to incorporate the S. A. bodily in the army and thus, by sheer weight of numbers, nazify the fighting forces.

In the ensuing struggle, Hitler at first did nothing. But when he acted he did so with fierce ruthlessness. The purge in Germany, precisely like those in Russia, resulted in the execution of many party members deemed inimical to the regime. And in both of these dictatorships executions were the reply of a relatively conservative leadership to those who wanted the revolution to make continuous progress.

Now Hitler has seen fit to order the rebuilding of the S. A. He has entrusted that organization with the "defense education and training" of all male Germans over 17 who are not already either in military service or in special Nazi military formations. The S. A. thus becomes what its old commander, Capt. Roehm, wanted it to be—an integral part of the Reichswehr.

Ostensibly the move is designed to build up Germany's military reserves. But, in addition, it is evident that Hitler's action is designed to break down the independence which the Reichswehr has hitherto enjoyed. All German soldiers, like all German diplomats, are now to become members of the Nazi Party. Here again there is a parallel with Russia, where much effort has been expended to make all conscripts authentic and documented Communists.

So the Third Reich, through the impulsion of necessity, moves more and more away from its capitalist base. It becomes increasingly communistic, differing from Russia primarily in the fact that it moves toward the same goal more slowly and more efficiently. The expansion of the S. A.'s functions and its incorporation in the Reichswehr means the elimination of the latter as a possible alternative to the existing regime. The changes now ordered in the German officers corps, destroying its caste aspects and increasing its democracy within the limits of Nazi membership, is another step indicating the growing similarity of the German and Russian systems.

In both cases all power, civil, economic, military, is increasingly concentrated in the hands of a single dictatorial party organization. In both cases there is the same ruthless subordination of every citizen to the arbitrary decrees of the governing group. In both cases this group blatantly identifies its will with the popular welfare. Even the superficially bitter antagonism between the Nazis and the Communists is a reflection of their growing similarity. Each resents the way in which the other has destroyed the heritage of civilization. The Nazis hate Russia because it made such a mess of communism. And the Communists hate Germany because the latter threatens to make their theories work under nominally hostile auspices.

Job Insurance Inquiry

In a surprise move, the Republican-dominated Assembly of New York has approved a resolution authorizing an investigation of the administration of the State system of unemployment insurance. From present indications the Senate will pass the resolution and the inquiry can be launched without the approval of Gov. Lehman, since no appropriation for carrying on the work is required.

It is generally admitted that in some cases intolerable delays have occurred between the time when unemployment insurance benefits were due and the date when payments were actually made. When Thomas E. Dewey was campaigning for Governor, he made a political issue of such charges. But the time for that has passed. Gov. Lehman himself acknowledges that the system "has not been perfect" and has set his advisory council to devising ways and means of keeping benefits on a current basis.

If the Legislature authorizes independent investigation by its own members, the inquiry should not be conducted with the intention of embarrassing the Governor, but simply with a view to expediting reforms that are in the interest of everybody regardless of party affiliations. It is, in fact, encouraging to find State legislators taking a lively interest in improving the administration of the laws that have been passed to give greater security to the people against the hazards of unemployment.

When a system of social insurance is once established, the matter of chief concern to everybody should be how to make sure that promised benefits are secure and available when needed. The value of any inquiry into the shortcomings of New York's administration of job insurance will depend upon the extent to which this main objective is kept in mind and the temptation resisted to make political capital out of administrative shortcomings.

The Bridges Case

Instead of seeking to impeach Secretary Perkins and other officials of the Department of Labor for failure to deport Harry Bridges, West Coast labor leader and alleged Communist, it would be more logical, if no more sensible, for Representative Thomas to demand the impeachment of judges who have refused to regard membership in the Communist Party as valid ground for deportation.

The Department of Labor has ordered the deportation of an acknowledged Communist, one Strecker. That order was upheld by the Federal District Court and on appeal reversed by the Fifth Circuit Court. The case is now before the Supreme Court, and until it hands down a decision, it would be useless for the Department to proceed against Mr. Bridges on the score that he is a Communist. In the first place, it would have to prove the charge, which he denies, and then it would have to wait until the conflict of decisions had been cleared up before taking action.

A third ground for ordering Bridges' deportation: namely, that he has advocated overthrow of the Government by force and violence, is, however, brought forward in the report of the Dies committee. In reply Secretary Perkins insists that there is no evidence to support such a contention. In any case, the only charge contained in the Bridges warrant which was supported by affidavits concerned his activities in the Communist Party. Consequently, unless the Supreme Court reverses the decision in the Strecker case, Secretary Perkins has been informed by the Solicitor General that the charges brought against Bridges, even if proved, have no legal significance.

Thus it appears that Representative Thomas is trying to impeach the Secretary for her efforts to avoid unnecessary expense and multiple litigation in the lower courts. "The warrants," she says, in a letter of explanation to Representative Norton, "in cases in this category have not been canceled and further action has been deferred only until the decision of the United States Supreme Court has been handed down."

That seems the only sensible proceeding. Certainly the Department of Labor is excusable for adopting a cautious policy in view of the confusion into which the issue of communism has plunged the judicial mind. For example, the status of the visiting English author and lecturer, John Strachey, is at the moment a complete muddle. About the only certainty in regard to that alleged Communist, who denies affiliation with the party, is his comparative harmlessness. Mr. Strachey was permitted to enter the country on bond under condition that he refrain from lecturing. On the ground that the American consulate had no right to revoke his visa, the United States Circuit Court of Appeals has just ruled that Mr. Strachey must be accorded a hearing if the Department of Labor has any doubt about his admissibility.

Thus the question of what tests to apply to determine whether a man is a Communist and what action to take if he is one becomes increasingly vexing and insistent. The Department of Labor is placed in a position that would call for the greatest circumspection under the most favorable conditions. When it lacks the support of clearly defined judicial decisions to guide its administrative actions, it should be supported rather than denounced for refusal to act precipitately.

Sticky "Southrons"

From the Petersburg, Va., Progress-Index

The eminently respectable New York Times a few days ago committed an offense which cannot be overlooked. A brief article stating that Southern organizations in New York City would observe the birthday of Gen. Lee was given this caption: "Southrons to Honor Lee."

Just why "Southrons" should be so utterly objectionable we do not know, but it is sticky with sentimentality. For one reason or another it calls to mind the worst of the Southern verse of post-bellum days, the most extravagant of the backwoods political oratory, and a dozen other connotations similarly unpleasant.

If the Times doesn't mind too much, we wish it would abandon "Southrons" in favor of "Southerners." We are certain the Southern people in New York City are not professional Southerners enough to deserve the former description.

Machiavellian Ideal

To the Editor of the Post—Sir: Recently I have heard references to Machiavelli as an outmoded old scoundrel whose political teachings were so abominable that they had been long since repudiated and thrown into the ash can. It seems to me, however, that the political doctrines of Aristotle, Plato, Marx, George, Rousseau and others have largely gone into the discard, while Machiavelli rules supreme in the present governments of Japan, Germany, United States, Russia and Italy. The following translation of Machiavelli's chief recommendations to rulers who would hold their jobs in perpetuity, taken from his "Il Principe," published in 1513, may serve to remind us how closely his formula is being observed today.

"A ruler who is wise and prudent cannot or ought not to keep his word when the keeping of it is to his prejudice. It is of great importance to disguise your intent and play the hypocrite well. A ruler need not have all good qualities in reality, but it is necessary that he seem to have them. It is honorable to seem mild, merciful, courteous and sincere, provided you can act quite contrary on occasion. It is convenient that the ruler's mind be flexible to all the puffs and variations of fortune, not forbearing to be good at times but knowing how to be evil when the need arises. For everybody sees how you appear but few know what in reality you are, and those few dare not oppose the opinion of the multitude. The wise ruler leaves acts of cruelty and injustice to his ministers, but himself performs the acts of favor and grace."

"If the chief party, whether it be the people or army or upper class, which you think most useful to you, be corrupt, you must follow their humor and indulge them, and in that case honesty and virtue are not useful to you."

"Hence it comes to pass that the ruler's resolutions of one day are dissolved in the next. No one knows what he desires or designs and no man can depend on his resolution. The wise ruler knows how to flatter the populace and oppress the upper classes. To keep his secretaries faithful he gives them high salaries and preferments so that the wealth and honor conferred by their master may keep them from looking out for themselves and make them afraid of a change, knowing that without the master's favor they could not subsist."

That's realism for you! And if you would see a monument to Machiavelli, look about you!

Leaders Of Foreign Birth

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I note that certain gentlemen who opposed the confirmation of Frankfurter for the Supreme Court accentuated his alien birth as a reason for his rejection. To me this is a strange American doctrine; a recrudescence of the pernicious doctrines of certain proscriptive organizations of malodorous memories.

Benedict Arnold was born within the territory which is now the United States. This distinction of birth did not prevent his betrayal of the American cause. John Barry, the famous naval hero, was born at Wexford, Ireland. Barry's Irish birth did not diminish his unalloyed devotion to the holy cause of American independence. Let us not forget that Christ was born in a stable.

Crown Of Thorns?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Harry Hopkins does not deserve the crown of thorns some Senators are trying to place upon him. All he did when millions were out of work and their families destitute was to build bridges, roads and other projects (some that will last forever) to give men work so they could clothe and feed their families.

Of course, they were grateful and voted for their friends. Dogs won't bite the hand that feeds them.

Some corporation Democrats are afraid Harry Hopkins will be the next President if Franklin D. Roosevelt does not accept the nomination. JOHN RIGGLES.

Unsolved Problems

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The President's annual message and his party speech at the Jackson Day dinner combine to give the impression that all that remains to be done now is to "consolidate the gains already made" and clothe the skeleton reforms already outlined with flesh. In other words, the President is laboring under the delusion that he has given us the blueprint of economic salvation. As a matter of fact, he has not solved the main problems before the country.

The 11,000,000 unemployed problem has not been touched. Low-cost housing moves at a snail's pace. The agricultural problem has not been solved by the "economy of security." We cannot feed, clothe and house people by taking land out of cultivation nor by restricting production.

We cannot create a true prosperity by inflation such as the spending of billions of dollars upon armaments entails. This policy is pouring money down a rat hole. It helps the steel trust and munitions makers. It puts the military crowd back in power. Under a military regime such as this huge rearmament program requires, civil liberties are relegated to the junk pile, as we saw in the World War. While I believe in adequate preparedness and the efficiency of our military forces, we are in no danger of attack. This big military drive indicates that our resources are to be used to supplement Great Britain's.

It is a favorite device of statesmen when their domestic policies are found unable to solve economic problems to resort to the line of least resistance and start a hue and cry against foreign invasion. This is true of the dictatorships. It is true of the New Deal.

Pedestrian Safety

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post of January 23, "A Pedestrian" suggested an "exclusive light" at street intersections for pedestrians.

As both a driver and a pedestrian, I've just been wondering how it would be possible to operate such a light for the pedestrian. Any such scheme is not only fantastic, but unnecessary, since the present lights are both adequate and satisfactory for pedestrian and driver alike.

Invariably, if a driver passes a red light, he is penalized to the tune of $10. (This morning, according to a broadcast over WOL, a 70-year-old driver from West Virginia was fined $30 for inadvertenly passing three red lights). However, every day, thousands of pedestrians dart across the streets against red lights and in front of automobiles and trolley cars, thus keeping the drivers of both with the jitters, but they are not only not fined, but not even molested.

Therefore, it is obvious that pedestrians should be governed by the present lights or fined for failure to be so governed.

Recently, while in Nashville and Birmingham, where the same lights govern both pedestrian and driver and jaywalking is positively prohibited, I couldn't help wondering why Washington lags behind in pedestrian control, since I'm sure the efficient Metropolitan Police Department would effectively enforce an adequate regulation for such control. HENRY P. PARRISH.

Riders and Guinea Pigs

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Having selected their major problem—that of determining how great a part of the population can be diverted from the production of things necessary and valuable and carried on the backs of the residual portion permitted to produce them—and having attained their long desired opportunity to turn the whole country into a vivisector's laboratory, our modern schoolmen next turned themselves to a determination of the method of greatest efficiency (for they are truly scientifically minded) to be applied to its solution.

Under no circumstances would it do to apply so simple and crass a method as that of taking direct control of the products of industry as they emerged, and making distribution in kind to producers and "riders" alike. Only "communists" would do that.

Nor would it do to permit those withdrawn from production and assigned the role of "riders" either to remain in idleness or be distinguishable from producers. It has not been the custom among Americans to be supported by others or look with favor upon those who are, and this emotional aspect must be recognized and the method adjusted to it—else the problem might never be solved. Indeed its underlying purpose might become exposed and even "public administrators" be thenceforth relegated to control of the affairs of the dead.

A guinea pig—whether assigned the role of residual producer or rider—must not be permitted to recognize that he is a guinea pig—else he may not only attempt to rush from the laboratory but also persuade his fellows to do so.

Miss Civil Service

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In behalf of the American Federation of Government Employes, I want to express our thanks and appreciation for the splendid work done by The Washington Post in conjunction with our anniversary exercises in honor of the fifty-sixth anniversary of the civil service law.

As you well know, your office presented a loving cup to "Miss Civil Service," considered to be typical of the kind of public servant that the Government requires and should have for successful administration. In this connection I want sincerely to express our gratitude to Mr. Scott Hart, who worked so hard in order to bring about a successful conclusion to that portion of our program.

Uncle Bill

HE WAS TALL and spare, and his face was as deeply grooved as the cotton fields after spring plowing. We children tagged at his heels all through the summer days while he worked in the garden and tended the cow and horses. He must have been a blood brother to Uncle Remus, for he was a born story-teller, recounting tales which he believed as implicitly as his small listeners. Occasionally he lapsed into truth, and told us of his slave days. He had been just our age when William's grandfather was brought home from Seven Pines wrapped in the Confederate flag.

He sang songs, too, that were neither wholly spiritual nor secular, but combined workaday and sacred themes with the naturalness of a simple and religious nature. And there were others—rollicking, and or simply tuneful acceptances of fate. A few linger in my memory, such as

"My ole Missis promised me
When she died she'd set me free;
She lived so long and she died so po'
She lef' me a-diggin' wid de ole gyarden hoe."

He liked having us around, for he was garrulous, and we were an uncritical and respectful audience, which was more than he had at home. He lived in a cabin in the pine woods across from the barn. We went there occasionally with my mother when she took things to Aunt Clara.

Clara was Bill's wife, and I might add, without any wish to be facetious, that she was also his cross. We did not like her, but had to call her "Aunt" out of respect for her age. She usually sat in a cushioned chair my mother had given her, for she was crippled with rheumatism and could hardly walk. Her face was dour and cheerless, and she seldom spoke except to utter complaints. She grudged her husband his cheerful conviviality, for religion weighed heavily upon her. Sometimes her silences would last for days, and once in the kitchen I heard Uncle Bill tell Nannie that he didn't know which was worse—when she got mad and wouldn't talk or when she got mad and did.

Poor soul, I suppose she suffered constantly, but Nannie said that she had been mean all her life, and slammed the oven door shut in a manner that left no doubt as to her opinion of the invalid.

"Bill say she's doin' po'ly, but she nags so much nobody kin tell jes' how bad off she is."

Then Uncle Bill came in, looking worried. It was late winter, and a cold rain had set in. Rain always made Aunt Clara worse. He ate his supper and Nannie filled a pan with hot biscuits and sausages for him to take home.

That night I was awakened by my mother and father dressing hurriedly and going out. Their door was open, and the lights made a white rectangle upon the wall of my room. The next morning I learned that Aunt Clara was dead.

The funeral was to be the following day, although the rain kept on in a steady downpour. During the morning my mother went out in the garden and picked a dishpan full of English violets that had begun to bloom in the warm February days. They were the big pale lavender ones, and looked almost gray under the electric light, but they were fresh and wet and very fragrant. She made a cross out of a piece of green cardboard and covered it thickly with the flowers. I stood by and handed her the string and scissors.

The rain was pouring harder than ever at noon. There was some talk of putting off the funeral, but the chances were that it might rain for a week.

At 2 o'clock the hearse came for Clara. No one went to the funeral except Uncle Bill and Aaron, the preacher. Nanny and I stood at the kitchen window and watched Aaron climb in front with the undertaker. Uncle Bill stayed in the back of the hearse with Aunt Clara. The rain came down in sheets, blurring our vision.

All afternoon Nanny's face was like a mask; she neither smiled nor scowled. I wished that she would scold me, or even send me out of the kitchen, but she did not seem to know that I was there. I watched her chunk up the fire in the stove and stand staring at the firebox. After a while she muttered that she meant no disrespect for the dead, but now Bill could have a little peace at last.

After supper I started back into the kitchen, but stopped in the doorway. Uncle Bill was coming in, and I was bashful and self-conscious in the presence of bereavement. Tomorrow I could ask him to tell me a story, but tonight I stood, inarticulate, in the pantry shadows. I heard the shuffle of his feet on the coco doormat, and as he stepped inside he wiped the rain off his face with the back of his hand. He looked old and stooped, and his hands fumbled so that he could not seem to get his cheeks dry.

I turned to go back into the dining room and saw a thin star winking at me through the window and remembered that it had cleared late that afternoon. It seemed queer that Bill's face was still wet.

Behind The Times

THE UNIVERSITY of Notre Dame has published a series of five lectures on "The Morality of the Newspaper," given by Richard Reid, of Augusta, Ga., editor of the Bulletin, a Catholic publication. They are thoughtful, interesting discussions, and newspapermen will find in them paragraphs of criticism and warning which should be taken to heart.

But, although Mr. Reid writes from experience, it seems to me that he has fallen behind the times, for he speaks of yellow journalism as though it were characteristic of the American press today, whereas it is my impression that yellow journalism has been on the wane for years and is now almost extinct. This probably calls for a definition of yellow journalism—too big a topic for compact discussion—but Mr. Reid cites matters which may be used as points of debate.

HE SAYS that the emphasizing of public enemy No. 1 and his criminal exploits created local counterparts, many of whom made records of murder and armed robbery before their careers of crime were ended. He also quotes "the police commissioner of New York in his annual report of a recent year" as complaining that the press published exaggerated stories of lawlessness which served to attract criminals who, because of the newspaper stories, believed that they could operate with impunity.

He further objects to the writings of "sob sisters" and other journalists who seek to glorify lawbreakers, defend murderers on the score of unwritten law and attempt to blind readers to the real character of a criminal by depicting him as a home lover and kind parent.

I SUGGEST that Mr. Reid is behind the times, because much of the press of this country has deliberately avoided the glorification of the hoodlum or public enemy for some years as a matter of editorial policy. Publication of news of the crimes of those criminals known as public enemies is another matter. The papers have no right to suppress such news; and if they were to do so, might be suspected of co-operating with criminals or whitewashing incompetent or crooked police.

It may be remembered that St. Paul was for years notorious as a haven for criminals and that in a more recent time a high official of the Federal Government, commenting on the kidnapings in that region, remarked that there seemed to be something rotten in St. Paul.

Nor was it the press that invited the term "public enemy" or the ranking system, and if for a time in the 20s newspaper treatment of crime was flippant or romantic it must be admitted that the whole country was crazy about them and sympathetic with criminals who provided a rebellious public with liquor.

I WOULD HAVE more confidence in discussing the report of the police commissioner of New York quoted by Mr. Reid if he had named the commissioner in question. For we did have a political commissioner here in recent years who suppressed the news of crime or made difficulties for the reporters assigned to get it and constantly complained that such news was published to discredit him and the administration and encourage criminals. This was not a rare occurrence. It has happened in other cities, and it is best to let the facts speak for themselves and unwise to rely entirely on the remarks of commissioners or chiefs who may be incompetent or guilty.

The sob sister, as anyone should know who claims to be an authority, is vanishing from American journalism, and women reporters for years have resented the name and avoided the sentimental approach. Perhaps that is too broad a denial. Better say that the sob sister and the sob technique are almost extinct.

THE TERM "unwritten law" is not a newspaper invention, and has the force of the written law in Texas and other sections of the country where morality runs high and, as for the exploitation of the private character, the chastity and piety of accused persons, Mr. Reid can be shown cases in which members of the clergy have given testimony to this effect which was entirely irrelevant to the charges on trial and unfair to the interests of the people.

"It would be interesting and perhaps alarming," Mr. Reid says, "to ascertain what part the papers played in building up the hatred which resulted in the attempted assassination of Mr. Roosevelt at Miami before his inauguration—an attempt which resulted in the death of the Mayor of Chicago."

I think it would be interesting, but reassuring rather than alarming, for the man who fired the shots was insane and complained only of pains in his stomach, and in most other States, would have been sent to a lunatic asylum rather than to the electric chair. Moreover, that attack occurred during the "honeymoon period," when Mr. Roosevelt was enjoying an enthusiastic press and before he took to calling his political opponents snakes in the grass, economic royalists, tories and well-fed clubmen—a form of address which he himself momentarily deplored about a year ago in a speech calling for moderation.

MR. REID may find it interesting also to consider what would have been the consequences if another attack had been made on the President of the United States in the campaign of 1936 and the assailant had justified himself on the ground that a famous priest had denounced the President as a liar and double-crosser and an anti-God.

The Illusion Of Financial Power

"ENGLAND and France," wrote Woodrow Wilson to Col. House on July 21, 1917 (the letter is cited in the newly published seventh volume of Ray Stannard Baker's authorized biography of the War President), "have not the same views with regard to peace that we have by any means. When the war is over we can force them to our way of thinking, because by that time they will, among other things, be financially in our hands."

Speaking in the House of Commons on November 1, 1938, more than 21 years later, Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain said:

"China cannot be developed into a real market without the influx of a great deal of capital . . . It is quite certain it cannot be supplied by Japan.

"Therefore, when anyone appears to contemplate a future in which Japan has a monopoly of the Chinese trade and we shall be excluded from it, I think it is flying in the face of facts. It is quite certain that when the war is over and the reconstruction of China begins she cannot be reconstructed without some help from this country."

MR. CHAMBERLAIN patently believes, as did Woodrow Wilson, in the efficacy of the financial weapon as a potent instrument of national policy. He believes, as the quotation shows, that it can be used to safeguard Britain's rights and interests in China. It is no secret that he and many British bankers believe it can also be used to snatch from Germany and Italy the fruits of a Franco victory.

They assume that when the war is over, Spain will be desperately in need of funds for reconstruction purposes; that Italy and Germany will be unable to supply such funds. They assume that Great Britain will be able to provide such funds, hence, Great Britain will in due course replace Italy and Germany as the power to whom Gen. Franco will inevitably turn.

We know that events proved Wilson tragically wrong. Is there any reason to believe that Chamberlain will be proved right?

AT THE TIME of the armistice, Great Britain and France were very considerably in this country's debt. They owed us billions of dollars and were in the market for more. That did not mean, however, as Wilson discovered to his sorrow, that the United States could dictate the terms of peace.

Nor is this the only example of the illusion of financial power. The postwar period has many such. We poured vast sums into Latin America. But it would be a sorry misreading of the history of recent years to believe for a moment that these loans tied the nations below the Rio Grande to our apron strings. We poured vast sums into central Europe as well, particularly after the Dawes' plan came into force. We have nothing to show for our loans except a lot of beautifully engraved documents, a quantity of blocked marks and an acrimonious correspondence with the Third Reich.

THE EXPERIENCE of other nations is equally illuminating. Before the World War, France advanced billions of francs to Czarist Russia. She is still trying to collect, and it was the existence of this debt which poisoned Franco-Soviet relations for years.

In the post-war period, France used the financial weapon on many occasions. The only time it proved effective—in the effort to prevent the German-Austrian customs union—the ultimate effects were fatal. And the frequent loans which the Paris government made to France's eastern allies, to keep them in line politically, have proved bad investments whether considered from an economic or diplomatic point of view.

IT IS GERMANY, however, which has most decisively exploded the fallacy of the Wilsonian illusion which Chamberlain appears to share. Under Dr. Schacht's tutelage the Third Reich has learned the enormously important lesson that the debtor is infinitely more powerful than the creditor. The debts owed by Germany to other nations was the bludgeon which Schacht used to bring those nations into line. He held over their head the fear of repudiation and in so doing compelled them to accept a larger volume of German trade. And so successful was this method that Germany today is everywhere trying to get in debt by buying up all the goods, particularly raw materials and foodstuffs, which other nations will sell to her for credit.

THE SCHACHT scheme may not continue to work indefinitely. But it has already worked long enough to prove that a nation in debt is not necessarily a nation obligated to bow to her creditors. Indeed, the contrary has been proved to be true.

Repudiation is a device which nations, great and small and the creditor nations included, no longer hesitate to use.

In the case of China it is quite true that once the war is over that country will be desperately in need of funds for reconstruction purposes. But if Japan wins, Japan will be the one to say how those funds are to be spent and if the other nations are unwilling to provide funds on Japan's terms, Japan will proceed with the exploitation of China, anyway, even as, without outside assistance, she has gone ahead with the exploitation of Manchurio.

IF FRANCO wins, it is also true that the money he will need for the rebuilding of Spain will, for the most part have to come, if it comes at all, from countries other than Italy and Germany. That does not mean, however, that the direction of spending will be in the creditor's hands. Nor does it mean that, through financial pressure on Franco, Great Britain and France would be able to recapture the concessions he may have to make to Hitler and Mussolini. For instance, Majorca is now in Italy's hands. Should Mussolini decide to keep it, which is not at all unlikely, not all the loans by Britain and France could compel them to disgorge this strategic base. There is far more likelihood, indeed, that the money which Britain may advance to Franco will be turned over to Italy in payment for aid rendered the generalissimo in the war.

Sit-Downs: Two Views

By Mark Sullivan

Inconsistency Noted

IN STATEMENTS by officials at Washington, and in the press, is much repetition of a view, or a fact—whichever it is—about the "sit-down." As it is put by Mr. Oswald Villard, writing in the weekly Nation: "Today, the sit-down strike is a thing of the past." It is put somewhat differently by Columnist Gen. Hugh Johnson: "The sit-down strike is in the dog-house." No doubt the general means that the sit-down is disapproved by public opinion, and that is probably true.

A Government official, Mr. Harry Hopkins, who should be able to speak authoritatively, during his testimony before a Senate committee, said of the sit-down: "A bad business . . . illegal." Another official, equally equipped to speak authoritatively, the new Attorney General, Mr. Frank Murphy, is even more definite:

"I do feel sure that the sit-down strike has now been thoroughly discredited, and I believe we have seen the end of it because it is an instrumentality that would undermine and destroy the vital rights of the ownership and possession of private property, one of the main pillars upon which our form of ecopomy and, indeed, our democracy is based."

All this would seem to suggest that the sit-down is "out," in Administration attitude as well as in public opinion. Yet all this is opposed by a fact.

THE NATIONAL Labor Relations Board, which has official jurisdiction in this field, is at the present moment earnestly upholding sit-downs in some cases. In several sit-down cases, the board has held that persons who took part in the sit-downs must, in spite of that fact, be re-employed by the plants in which the sit-downs took place. The board says it limits the sit-downs it upholds to ones in which the employing corporation, in the board's judgment, was at fault; ones in which the employing corporation had in the beginning, as the board claims, tried to avoid collective bargaining.

At the same time, two of the sit-downs which the board upholds were of an especially extreme type. In these two cases, some of the sit-downers not only held possession of the plants against the owners, but also resisted police and sheriffs, with some violence. In both cases the sit-downers were ultimately arrested, tried, convicted and fined or imprisoned.

In these two cases, decisions of the Labor Board required the employing corporations to re-employ the sit-downers. The decisions were appealed to the courts. In one case, a circuit court over-ruled the Labor Board. Thereupon the board carried the case to the Supreme Court, where it now is. In the other case, the employing corporation has appealed from the board's decision to a circuit court. In one of these cases, within three weeks past, the board has appeared in court arguing in behalf of its position.

THE INCONSISTENCY between the Labor's Board's attitude and, on the other hand, the expressions from two Government officials, Secretary of Commerce Harry Hopkins and Attorney General Murphy, is puzzling.

Another inconsistency that makes it difficult to report Washington developments with confidence has to do with the Administration's attitude toward business. From source after source come statements or implications that the Administration and business are to be at peace, that by unity and joint effort they are going to bring recovery. In Fort Worth, Tex., the President's son, Elliott told a radio audience that the next two months would "see an unprecedented movement toward harmony between Government leaders and business." From newspapermen who know Secretary of Commerce Hopkins well come similar predictions. From one comes the assurance that "Harry Hopkins is passionately interested in stimulating economic recovery." From various sources come stories that several high Administration officials are shortly to make a series of speeches throughout the country, having the effect of a kind of old-fashioned revival meeting adapted to the world of business.

AT THE SAME TIME the President appoints to the Interstate Commerce Commission, which has control over the railroads, a former Congressman, commonly regarded as far on the radical side. The appointee's attitude toward business is reflected by an amendment to the Constitution which he proposed when in Congress. His amendment would give to Congress "the power to enact laws for the ownership, operation and management through instrumentalities of the Federal Government, of business, manufacturing, commerce, industry and banking."

Here, as in the matter of the sit-down strike, the difference between words and actions, between hope and fact, makes Washington difficult to interpret. Probably we shall have to fall back on the old French saying "We shall see what we shall see."

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

U. S. Foreign Policy in the Making: Senator Nye and Mr. Stimson

EVERYONE must wish that we had a clear foreign policy. But there is a reason why we do not have one. It is that we are trying to fit together the remnants of several different foreign policies and to reconcile a number of excellent but contradictory emotions. The difficulty can be studied in the matter of the Spanish embargo and of the neutrality act as applied to the Sino-Japanese war.

Here, for example, is Senator Nye, who has done more than any other living American to convince the people that if they export munitions to a country that is at war they will eventually be drawn into that war. In the summer of 1936 a civil war broke out in Spain. But it was a civil war which was in part also an international war, with Russia supporting one side, Italy and Germany the other. The neutrality law then in force did not apply to a civil war. As soon as Congress assembled in January, 1937, the Administration asked for an embargo on munitions to Spain. Senator Nye voted for it. The House laid the embargo by a vote of 411 to 1; the Senate, after one day's debate, laid the embargo by a vote of 81 to 0.

BUT LAST SPRING Senator Nye introduced a resolution to lift the embargo in order that the Madrid government might get arms. He announced that as regards Spain "the purpose has not been served." Forced to choose between his old conviction that the export of munitions would draw us into war and his sympathy with the loyalist government, Senator Nye, who has always wanted to lay embargoes, decided that he wanted to lift the Spanish embargo.

And then he complains in a broadcast to the Nation that we do not have a consistent and clearly defined foreign policy.

A MUCH MORE impressive example of the contradictions that have to be resolved if we are to have a clear policy is to be found in the position of Mr. Henry L. Stimson. He does not, of course, see eye to eye with Senator Nye on the theory of embargoes. But at the present time Mr. Stimson is advocating a policy of embargo against Japan in the Pacific and of lifting the embargo in favor of loyalist Spain in the Atlantic.

Moreover, unless I am greatly mistaken, Mr. Stimson did not object to the Spanish embargo when it was laid two years ago, and probably he favored it. For Mr. Stimson believes in collective action and the embargo was laid in co-operation with Mr. Anthony Eden in England and M. Leon Blum in France.

I ASSUME that Mr. Stimson was in favor of co-operation. For in October, 1935, at the time of the League's sanctions against Italy in the Ethiopian affair, he wrote in favor of giving the President the power to prohibit exports to Italy in order to co-operate with the League. In October, 1937, he wrote in favor of a collective embargo against Japan, and he still favors that.

NOW THE Spanish embargo of January, 1937, was, though many have now forgotten the fact, an attempt on the part of the United States to co-operate with Britain and France in localizing the Spanish war. The reason why Congress was unanimous for the Spanish embargo is that the isolationists like Mr. Nye saw it as a protection against entanglement and the believers in collective security saw it as a form of practical co-operation with Britain and France.

Mr. Stimson says today that the Spanish embargo was a violation of international law. And of course it was. But in 1936-1937 those who believed in "collective security" believed that international law had been radically amended. And is not that what Mr. Stimson still believes when he thinks about the Japanese aggression in China?

I DO NOT cite the difficulties of Mr. Stimson's position because I know how to clear them up, but in order to illustrate the inherent difficulties of the problem. When a man as high minded, as learned, and as experienced as Mr. Stimson falls into such contradictions, it is certain that the formulation of American foreign policy is no simple matter.

WHAT WE ARE trying to do is to combine several different theories, each of which makes a strong appeal to American interest and American sentiment. We should like to maintain our traditional rights as neutrals in the event of war. We should like also to avoid being drawn into the war by American exporters who exercise the ancient rights of neutrals. We should like also to see aggression resisted; we do not wish to have our economic power used to help an aggressor; we should like it to support those who resist aggression. In short, we should like to remain at peace, and we should like to see righteousness prevail.

But the fact of the matter is that we cannot have all these things at once; and by trying to carry on all these policies at once, we get the disadvantages of all of them and none of the benefits of any one of them.

If we try to have a policy in Spain on the theory that collective action is a failure, and a policy in the Far East on the theory that collective action will work, we shall, I very much fear, get ourselves into trouble in both the oceans at once. If at this late date, we lift the embargo on Spain, we shall antagonize not merely Gen. Franco, the Italians and the Germans, but the British and the French governments as well; we shall be giving feeble and altogether inadequate encouragement to the loyalists, and we shall be creating complete confusion in whatever the British and French policy may be.

And if on top of that we challenge Japan in the name of collective action, having just rebelled against collective action in Spain, we are likely to find ourselves trying to stop the Japanese in China by means sufficient to provoke them to anger but insufficient to bring them to terms.

MY OWN VIEW is that in the world as it is today we can have no policy except in regard to those things about which the Nation is prepared to go to war. Policies based on measures short of war can lead only to humiliation and failure in a time when so many great powers are prepared to fight for what they want. We can have no real policy, I think, in China; we can have no real policy in Spain; we can have no real policy in central Europe. We do not intend to fight in those regions of the earth, and so the sooner we stop fighting amongst ourselves about the Chinese, the Spaniards, and the central Europeans, the more clearly we shall begin to see our course in these difficult days.

The vital points of our foreign policy lie not in the interior of Europe and Asia but in the two oceans that separate us from Europe and Asia. Our most vital interest is that there shall never be in those two oceans a power or a combination of powers capable of attacking us or of intimidating us. So we are vitally concerned with the development of Japanese naval power. We should be vitally concerned if the Germans and Italians broke through the French army and the British navy and established themselves as naval and air powers in the Atlantic in alliance with the Japanese power in the Pacific.

OUR TRUE national interest is to insist that the strategic points of control in the Pacific and the Atlantic are either in our hands or in the hands of friendly powers that we can trust. That is, I believe, the working principle of an effective foreign policy in the world as it now is; whereas many of the other things we talk about are merely advertisements of our hopes and our preferences. What we do should be done for that reason, openly and avowedly, and not for sentiment, not for ideology, not for the sake of broken-down treaties, not for any theory about the causes of war, but simply and solely because that is the only way we can defend our peace.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Uncle Sam Tells All

Lissen, folks . . .
I'm feeling pretty good . . .
The old spring, or sumpin,
Is back in my knees . . .
I'm r'arin' to go . . .
BUT—
I'm still jumpy.

The headache is better . . .
My ambish is back . . .
I have the urge to go
Places and do things . . .
BUT—
Those jitters still pursue me.

Not so many men are chasing
Me with needles . . .
They've reduced the Medical staff . . .
BUT—
I'm still nervous.

I could stage a sprint
Right now if they would
Only permit it . . .
My arches are better . . .
I feel buoyant, in fact
I feel good and buoyant . . .
I'm happy because the Experimental Squad
Is not so hot on my trail . . .
BUT—
I still hear funny noises.

My breathing is better . . .
Not perfect, but better . . .
It's swell to look into Those medicine cabinets and
Not see so many bottles . . .
BUT—
I'm afraid they haven't
Destroyed 'em.

I haven't that all-gone feeling
Since Dr. Roosevelt and
His staff eased up on
Their treatments . . .
I hear they are not
Going to make so many visits
BUT—
I'd feel better if they'd
Make it official.

I wanna get going . . .
I feel fit . . .
With a little co-operation
By all hands I'd be
On my toes
BUT—
I still see threatening
Motions.

I'm ready for the green light
But all I get is the
Caution sign . . .
It's better than the red
BUT—
It's not good enough.

Lissen, Dr. Roosevelt . . .
Lissen, Congress . . .
Lissen, Industry . . .
Can't you get together
And give me the go signal
Instead of the works?

How's chances?
And when you answer
Don't mark it "COLLECT."

Gov. Price Assails Byrd's Criticism Of PWA Program

Richmond, Va., Jan. 25 (AP).—Gov. Price took issue today with Senator Harry Byrd's criticism of Federal expenditures as far as Virginia is concerned.

Saying that PWA grants and loans to Virginia have totaled $393,000,000, the Governor said "the public improvement program in Virginia has been stepped up possibly ten years by these Federal grants, which have been of tremendous benefit to the localities of Virginia.

"This divrsified building program was initiated by local citizens familiar with local community needs. They know such public improvements must be paid for, irrespective of whether Virginia receives or does not receive Federal grants."

The Senator, himself a former Governor of Virginia and a long-time advocate of economy in government, reiterated before the Augusta-Staunton Chamber of Commerce last night his assertion that Virginia's share of the national debt will be at least $1,000,000,000.

Persons Who Feel Eclipsed By Brilliant Relatives Are Advised to Establish New Environment

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: If space permits, I should like to send out a word of encouragement and advice to two of your youthful correspondents whose problems remind me very much of myself at a slightly earlier period in my life. First, take "Just Average," (January 20), the boy who feels inferior to his brilliant family. I was in the same boat at 17, and my attitude bid fair to ruin my personality, appearance and social life—for at that age, the twig is indeed bending to the shape of the adult tree.

Something ought to be done—and soon—to restore this boy's self respect and to build up his sense of individuality and self esteem. As his family is well off, it should not be difficult for him to persuade them to send him away to school, where he can begin on a fresh page of relationships; and they should do so joyously, fully alive to the contribution they will be making to his future well being in doing so.

In my own case, a year devoted to getting rid of inhibitions and constricting social attitudes (that had their origin in a faulty relationship to my own family), found me practically another person. Since then, I have held steadfastly to that better personality, and have never allowed myself to fall back into the family pattern of values and comparisons. Opportunity for independence of action, and for the exercise of individual initiative, is bound to develop self respect in any youngster; and sometimes he can only get a firm grip and a sound perspective on himself by getting completely away from the home environment which produced his stultifying conviction of being ignominiously buried at the bottom of a heavily brilliant heap.

Now, for the second case: The girl who describes herself as a "cool cucumber emotionally," (January 24), and who finds herself in such a dither over whether she should marry "the perfect man," when she isn't sure that she loves him with a truly "romantic love." I think you were a little hard on her, in suggesting that she was a "foolish romanticist." I can assure her that all her imaginative ideals of a great love will quickly come down to earth when she falls in love actually.

I, too, was a "cool cucumber," and feared missing the exalted love one reads about, and thought wildly of being forced to "compromise" with this or that supposedly "ideal" beau. But thank heaven, I made no such mistake. Finally, the "real thing" crept into my cool heart; not what I had read about, nor dreamed of in my reveries. Nor did I give my heart to the man because he was the best catch who had come my way so far. But just because he was himself; because whatever he was, he touched the spring lock that released real love—that is romantic, and earthy, and affectionate and human, too. I'm not being imaginative, either. I've been married three years to him, and it's still like that.

FORMER CUCUMBER.

Praise for "Just Average"

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: The service rendered by a reply such as yours to January 20's "Just Average," is of immeasurable value. Two things about this young man's story impressed me very favorably. First, he spoke highly of his mother and father, and, in fact, of all other persons to whom he referred. And, second, he exhibited a quality of modesty which one cannot help but admire.

He represents the type of individual who stands back a bit and gives the advantage to the other fellow. He lacks confidence in some degree now, but in the long run he is likely to outstrip most of those who, at present, seem to be making a brilliant showing. The very fact that he is not satisfied with his own accomplishments indicates, to me, that his standards are high and that he will work diligently to improve himself.

Another of your recent articles which interested me was that of January 18, treating the problem of a 40-year-old bachelor who has never yet found, in any walk of life, the woman who could "push him over the brink of matrimony." I believe that your stand in this matter—namely, that the incidence of falling ardently in love depends more upon the individual's own emotional capacity than upon the qualities of the person addressed—is sound. I think your reply contributed generously to the solution not only of this man's problem, but also to the problems of others who may find themselves in similar difficulties.

READER.

Friend for "Perplexed"

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I should very much like to get in touch with the 21-year-old girl, unmarried and expecting a child, whose letter you published on January 23. I think I may be in a position to help her find a solution to her unhappy situation. If she is at all interested, she may get in touch with me through you, since I am enclosing my name and address, which I ask you not to publish. Sincerely,

INTERESTED.

Another "Friend in Need"

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: If "Perplexed," the young girl who finds herself in the painful position of expecting a child out of wedlock, wishes to communicate with me through your column (and I am enclosing a separate letter addressed to her), I believe that—out of a grateful heart and some experience in helping others—I may be able to offer her some encouragement, sympathy and assistance in her trouble. And if you know of other instances where a friend is needed, I shall be glad to help out with what time I have at my disposal. My own gratitude for blessings received seems to overflow, and I know of no better way to utilize it. Most sincerely yours, G. P.

Colorful Gloves Are Wardrobe Tonic

Toward the end of January most sedentary Washingtonians are completely bored with their drab winter clothes, envious of those who can escape into Southern climes and new wardobes. A sure way to bolster up the morale is to add colorful accessories to the old black dresses. Such a tonic is the pair of hand stitched, pastel tinted doeskins shown above. They were created by Kislov of Paris, in white, caramel and other beguiling tones. They are processed against drying and cracking in laundering and can be washed in hot water and emerge as soft as down

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

A Bill of Goods

"Hello . . . Mrs. Hack? . . . Are you busy? . . . Well, I wanted to talk to you about a very important matter. You know our club election is not far off and we've got to be thinking about things . . . Yes . . . Well, a little group of us got together today and were sort of planning a ticket and—Oh now, Mrs. Hack, don't say that! No, because you were one of the very first ones we put down on our slate . . . Yes . . . for secretary! Corresponding secretary!

"Now, now, Mrs. Hack, just wait a minute! You see, in a big club like ours the corresponding secretary has such a tremendous job . . . no, no, I didn't mean she has so much to do. I mean its such an important office . . . Oh, but really the work's not so bad. At least it wouldn't be for an efficient woman like you . . . Mrs. Nitter? Well, she's always complaining anyway. Just between us, that's the reason we all want a change—What? . . . Oh, no, of course you wouldn't want to hurt her feelings but I absolutely know she wouldn't have it again—no, I don't mean that either. What I mean is that she realizes the club wants somebody else . . . You see, there's been a lot of dissatisfaction this year. So many didn't get their notices . . . Yes, and then the way she's let letters accumulate."

"Well, the whole thing is, Mrs. Hack, that positively everybody in the club wants you so badly. You see, we feel it's most important that we have the right type of woman for corresponding secretary . . . yes, and you're the very first one everybody thought of . . . Oh, but really there isn't so much work about being corresponding secretary. You see, it's not very long now until summer, when we'll adjourn, and then we don't really get very busy until October.

"Somebody else? . . . Oh, but there really isn't anybody that'll—what I mean is that we'd have, . . . Oh yes, of course I agree with you that the new members ought to be given a chance, but in an office like this you want someone that'll be absolutely responsible and a good worker . . . Mrs. Bigger? . . . Oh, she wouldn't have—what I mean is she isn't the type for the job . . . No, she hasn't the slightest tact . . . Mrs. Clymer? . . . Well, she's so new yet. Anyway, we think she'd be good for chairman of the guest committee . . . Mrs. Wiggle? . . . No, she isn't the type either. You see, Mrs. Hack, all the officers of the club are more or less before the public, what I mean is they sit at the speakers' table at the club banquet and we do want to be sure we have the right type of women—you see what I mean.

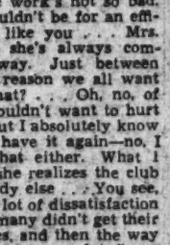
"You can't? . . . Oh now, Mrs. Hack, don't make me go back and tell the girls that. They'll be so disappointed . . . Yes, you see they've all got their hearts set on you—and another thing, you have a typewriter. It won't be any trouble for you to write the notices . . . Oh really, it won't be much work and anyway you just have a natural gift for writing.

"Another thing, Mrs. Hack, the office of corresponding secretary will be especially important this year because we're thinking of having whoever takes it do the publicity of the club too . . . Yes, send the notices and write-ups to the paper . . . and get the photographers to come . . . Oh now, Mrs. Hack, it wouldn't be much more work. And think of all the interesting contacts. Besides you've such a marvelous personality for dealing with people . . . Oh yes you have! Everyone in the club says so.

"What? . . . Now, now, Mrs. Hack, please don't say 'No' definitely. No, please don't. Everyone'll be so disappointed. We simply can't find anybody else—no, what I mean is there's nobody else that anyone wants . . . Yes, positively, everyone wants you . . . No, no, they're not trying to shift any work on you. No, they really want you . . . Think it over? . . . Well, really Mrs. Hack I just hate to face the girls without a 'yes' from you when they want you so much . . . Yes, they'll be SO disappointed . . . Oh you will! . . . You really will! How grand! Well, I know the girls will be simply thrilled to death!".

At Home Go to College

"UNFAIR," thinks Jane, watching Eve and Don leaving for college. "They'll go places in life, but it's the same old rut for me."



So Jane thinks! But anyone with spunk can have the qualities which give college people the breaks. Such qualities don't spring mysteriously from the walls of Harvard but from education—and you can educate yourself at home on a simple plan.

What distinguishes college people in a group? While others bore with dull talk of petty, everyday affairs, the college people talk interestingly of what's going on in the world.

Get on equal terms with them by consistently reading newspapers, magazines, following radio programs which present exciting questions of the day. Keep up with politics, new books, music.

You put yourself in the active-minded class, too, when you have an aim in life.

Resolve to know more than the average about some one thing.

A knowledge of fine furniture and fabrics may lead to a fascinating job in interior decorating. A department store stenographer who learned all she could about handkerchiefs attracted the attention of executives, became an advertising writer.

But, whatever your specialty, you'll want to be familiar with general subjects college people study. Read great novels, outline books in history, the social sciences, philosophy—to have confidence with cultured people.

What to read? How to make the most of your chances? Get our 40-page booklet, "Suppose You Haven't Gone to College." Outlines simple plans requiring a few minutes a day—for cultural background.

Send 15 cents for our booklet, "Suppose You Haven't Gone to College," to The Washington Post Home Institute, 100 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Jan. 25.

SONJA HENIE, the whirling baby doll from Oslo, has just finished her annual splurge on the ice of Madison Square Garden and her audiences were larger and more loving than ever. All seats save a few bad and costly pews were occupied at every show, and the opening performance alone drew $32,000 at the boxoffice—which, as that man says, isn't alfalfa.

When it is all over, after 82 shows on the congealed water, it is estimated that the little doll will have earned $200,000 for herself—that is, until Uncle Samuel begins cutting his share. Sonja is one of the most amazing drawing cards in all history, and what puzzles me is what on ice she is going to do with all that money. Of course, her reign as a movie queen will not be long, but she certainly has mopped up while the sponging was good.

Her extravaganza is no longer a sports event, but strictly a spectacle-show rightly wearing a Hollywood label. Her audiences are not skating experts, but Henie fans, and they are satisfied with her lightning spins. They love to feast their eyes on her pretty blondness, and this year she bowls us over with a tango skated with the handsome, dark Stewart Reyburn—the first time she has skated pair on local ice. It was a honey of a number, and so was the show piece of the evening, "Alice in Wonderland."

There were catty reports that Sonja was slowing up. She boiled at this canard. "My spins are faster and longer than ever," she boiled. A young man of the troupe was cornered. "Well," he said, "she seems a little heavier, but I don't think she weighs over 120." But what of all these rumors and sly digs? The fact remains that little Henie is one of the wonders of our time!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—It is reported about own that Joan Crawford is headed our way, and may even work in a Broadway show. Probably one produced by The Group Theater, which she and Franchot Tone helped finance with movie boodle. Since Tone is now working in one of the group plays, "The Gentle People," it would be an interesting situation if his ex, La Crawford, went through with this stage stunt under the same banner. Personally, I don't believe it.

Diana Blythe finally saw her papa, John Barrymore, after more than a year, and met his new wife, La Belle Elaine Jacobs Barrie Barrymore. Diana's own mamma, Michael Strange, is down in Palm Beach—and, as you remember, there was a Mrs. Barrymore in between, the lovely Dolores Costello, who is the mother of John Barrymore, jr., now a handsome young boy. Very confusing little family, that!

Movie Star Saved Figure by Exercise

By Ida Jean Kain.

JOAN BLONDELL, who is the proud possessor af a 7-month-old daughter, has resumed her screen career looking lovelier than ever, and with the same perfect figure.

There was a time when screen stars adopted their children to prevent any detraction from their beauty or obstacle to their careers. But gradually it became known for a fact that some of the most beautiful women in pictures already had half-grown daughters! And now the entire feminine world scoffs at the idea that there is ever any necessity for losing one's figure—even at such a crucial period.

The screen stars keep their figures perfect because they follow rigorous programs and it isn't just because Joan Blondell is so young that she has managed to regain her former symmetry. She adhered to a very definite plan of exercise and limited her weight gain to 20 pounds.

Muscles Need Strengthening

Perhaps the most remarkable thing is the fact that the star never wore a girdle during this time, but made her muscles support the extra burden. As exercise, she gardened, did mild, side-to-side rolling exercises, and walked 3 miles a day. All this, af course, had her doctor's approval.

Following arrvial of the baby, special exercises are always in order. The stretched muscles of the bust and abdomen, particularly, need strengthening. Here are two exercises for this purpose which may be started in the second week, with your doctor's permission:

The first is the knee-chest position and it may be practiced in bed any time after the first week. Turn over on the face and kneel with the trunk bent forward from the hips, chest and elbows resting on the mattress, and arms folded render the chin. The abdomen should be drawn up and in, and the muscles of the buttocks contracted to give the correct tilt to the pelvis.

Exercise Rebuilds Figure

In this exercise, the organs are assisted to their normal position, and it is a very good exercise to be taken in bed, just before going to sleep. In this way the organs are encouraged to remain in normal position overnight.

The second exercise strengthens the muscles of the bust and abdomen. Lie on the back on the bed or a mat on the floor, with the hands at the shoulders. Bend one knee to the chest and extend both hands upward and back, forcibly, on the mattress. Return arms to shoulders, and extend the leg. Continue the exercise bending the other leg. Try to make the movements rhythmical.

Exercise is more important after the arrival of the baby than at any other time in your life. It is impossible to regain your figure unless you do adopt remedial measures.

Mrs. Hull's Reception Establishes New High for Cabinet At-Homes

1,200 Attend Largest Official Tea of Season; Wives of State Department Aides Assist Hostess

By Hope Ridings Miller

The Post Society Editor.

Official at-homing reached a new high yesterday afternoon when Mrs. Cordell Hull shook hands with more than 1,200 guests who called to leave cards and have a cup of tea at her reception at the Carlton Hotel.

Diplomats, dowagers and debutantes; newcomers and cave-dwellers; State Department officials and delegates to the Cause and Cure of War Conference made up a continuous line that moved through the north lobby into the Carlton Room from 4 to 6 o'clock. As everybody knows, that room is one of the largest in Washington; but it wasn't half big enough yesterday. Crowded to the walls it was for well over two hours, and during most of that time the long table in the center was completely hidden by scores of guests who clustered around it. Whether it was the biggest Cabinet "at home" ever to make Capital social history I do not know, but certainly it surpassed anything of its kind this season.

HOPE R. MILLER.

Guests calling early to avoid the crowd found a huge throng assembled shortly after 4 o'clock. Those coming in later with the hope of missing the crush found themselves in the midst of one; and it was not until after 6 o'clock that the crowd began to disperse.

Despite its size, however, the party was a pleasant one; so much so, in fact, that many a man who rarely attends afternoon functions came and stayed until the last cup of coffee and tea had been poured, the last sandwich consumed.

Ladies who lingered longest had an unexpected treat. With much fanfare and oom-pah, two celebrities—Errol Flynn and Douglas Corrigan—appeared in the lobby of the Carlton and were immediately surrounded. Meanwhile, Mrs. Hull, having greeted her last guest (Mrs. Homer S. Cummings), had gone upstairs to her apartment. Come celebrities or go celebrities, her siege of hand-shaking was over for the day.

Is Assisted by Wives of Officials

One of the Capital's most gracious and most popular hostesses, Mrs. Hull received in the north lobby adjoining the room where the crowd assembled. She wore a black frock of pailletes and crepe with floor-length skirt and short sleeves. A string of pearls and a gardenia corsage completed her stunning ensemble.

Wives of officials of the State Department assisted her during the afternoon, alternating at the tea table and generally looking after the mammoth crowd.

"Did you ever see so many people?" was the question you heard on all sides as you threaded your way to the tea table. Apparently, nobody ever had—not at a Cabinet "at home," anyway.

Mrs. Roper Guest Instead of Hostess

If the original schedule had been followed, the throng might have been somewhat divided between two receptions. Mrs. Roper, had her husband remained in the Cabinet, would also have been entertaining. But as it turned out, both Mrs. Roper and the former Secretary of Commerce were among Mrs. Hull's guests. They came early and seemed to be having the time of their lives.

Pushing through to the tea table struggle though it was, was worth it. A huge bouquet of pink roses decorated the center, and flames from a quartet of tall white tapers on either side spilled liquid light on silver

Mrs. Sumner Welles, wearing a smart frock of black crepe and silver lame and a snappy black tricorne, was pouring tea when I first caught a glimpse of the lavishly laden tea table. At the opposite end, Mrs. James Clement Dunn, in a smart black ensemble, presided over the coffee urn and served a seemingly endless line of men and women who were standing three deep around her.

Before the afternoon was over, others on the list of assistants took their places at the table. In the group were Mrs. Francis B. Sayre, Miss Jennie Moore, Mrs. George S. Messersmith, who was gowned in red crepe, worn with a wide brimmed hat, trimmed in red; Mrs. Herbert Feis, Mrs. Green H. Hackworth, Mrs. Stanley Hornbeck, Mrs. Harry McBride, whose wine-colored ensemble was most attractive; Mrs. Cecil V. Gray and Mrs. John F. Stone.

During the latter half of the party, if not earlier, a sizeable number of State Department officials moved and mingled in the company. Foreign diplomats were liberally sprinkled through the crowd, and members of the Congressional set were all over the place.

Diplomats There By the Dozens

George T. Summerlin, who seemed to know everybody at the party, was here, there and everywhere for more than an hour. Herbert Feis, whose shock of unruly white hair always gets the spotlight, was another State Department notable glimpsed in a throng that also included Leo Pasvolsky, Charles H. Spruks, Henry A. McBride, R. Walton Moore, and just about everybody else you can name from the State Department.

Diplomats also were there by the dozen. Virtually every Embassy and Legation was represented in the company. To mention but a few from this group there were Senora de los Rios, wife of the Spanish Ambassador, seen with Mme. Ertegun, wife of the Turkish Ambassador; Mme. Horinouchi, wife of the newly arrived Japanese envoy; the Minister of Portugal and Mme. de Bianchi, accompanied by the latter's daughter, Miss Sibella Skidelsky; Mme. Pelenyi, wife of the Hungarian Minister; the Minister of Czecho-Slovakia and Mme. Hurban chatting with a group that included the Minister of South Africa and Mrs. Ralph William Close, the Rumanian Counselor and Mme. Babes, Mme. Bilmanis, wife of the Latvian Minister, sipping a cup of tea; Dr. Hans Thomsen, Charge d'Affaires of the German Embassy; the Siamese Minister and Mme. Rajamaitri, and Mme. Peter, wife of the Swiss Minister, who, as usual, was one of the most popular guests.

Ambassador Johnson Is Popular Guest

Very much a center of attention was the United States Ambassador to China, Nelson Johnson. I didn't see Mrs. Johnson, but it's quite possible she was somewhere in the crowd. Norman Davis also came in for a brief stay and collected quite a crowd around him. Ralph Totten, former United States Minister to South Africa, was there; also, Gen. John Phillip Hill, Clarence Hewes, Mrs. J. L. Houghteling, Mrs. Henry F. Grady, Dr. L. S. Rowe, of the Pan-American Union; Mrs. Millard Tydings, Mrs. Charles L. McNary, the Misses Mary and Josephine Patten, Mrs. Patrick Hurley.

Still others I saw were Mme. Oumansky, wife of the Charge d'Affaires of the Soviet Embassy; Senora de Pastoriza, wife of the Dominican Minister; Mrs. Sol Bloom and her daughter, Miss Vera Bloom; Mrs. Stanley Woodward, Mme. Van Kaathoven, Mrs. Pierrepont Moffat, Mrs. William B. Bankhead, Mrs. William Jennings Price, Mrs. Ernest G. Draper, Admiral and Mrs. Mark Bristol, Mrs. Ralph Brewster, Mrs. Bruce Barton, Mrs. Alexander V. Dye, who with her husband will leave tomorrow for Florida.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

NOT FOR AGES have so many important United States ambassadors been concentrated in Washington as during this winter. One of them who is still here is Nelson Johnson, our envoy to China, who with Mrs. Johnson is being widely feted during their stay. They are with the Ambassador's sister, Miss Elizabeth Johnson, until they leave next month for Cody, Wyo., to see their children.

Mr. Johnson has had his headquarters in three different cities since the war began. First he moved from the former capital, Peking, to Nanking, and then to Chiungtung, the present capital. This city is located in a remote area way up the Yangtze and was seldom even visited by foreigners before.

THE PRESENT CONFLICT in the Orient is separating a number of American families. Mrs. Johnson will not accompany her husband back to China, and we hear that Langhorne Bond, now on leave from his airlines job there, will return without Mrs. Bond. The former Kitsy Dunlop would have to fly directly over the Japanese lines to reach her husband's post, which, even though she has done a lot of flying in the past, seems rather unpleasant. She has made several trips to her home here via the China Clipper, accompanied by her little baby.

DR. JACOB GOULD SCHURMANN, who was our Minister to China a number of years ago, will be joined here early next month by his daughter, who has been living in China, where her husband, a Russian, is an engineer. Another daughter, Mrs. John Magruder, wife of Col. Magruder, U. S. A., is living in Washington. After his term as envoy to China, her father served also as Ambassador to Germany and Turkey.

THE WASHINGTON ICE CLUB, which got off to a rather slow start this year, its first, is now just about the most popular institution in the Capital. On Sunday mornings, even after the latest parties, the members pull themselves together and go out for the skating from 11 to 1. Some die-hard enthusiasts have made a point of going to bed earlier on Saturday nights since joining the club.

Among the bright, particular stars on the ice are Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Wyeth, Mrs. Arthur Clephane, the latter the best skater in the club; Mr. and Mrs. Creighton Peet, Mr. and Mrs. John Borton, Mr. and Mrs. Lucius Wilmerding. Col. William McKee Dunn, Mrs. James Bonbright and Miss Carol Agar.

ALL CONVERSATION stops these days when Mrs. Pearsons Rust enters a room wearing the new hat which she brought back from a trip to New York. Made in the shape of a pancake, it is white with a white snood effect and several yards of trailing black chiffon behind. It causes a tremendous sensation. Mrs. Rust, by the way, will entertain at tea on Sunday.

MORE DINNERS before the Grant Mason dance on Saturday, with Mrs. Rodgers Barker and William McComb among the hosts. Other parties include Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis' tea tomorrow, Mrs. Hugh O'Donnell's dinner Saturday; Mrs. Crosby Miller's luncheon on Sunday at Viewtree in Warrenton, and the dinner which the Naval Attache of the German Embassy and Frau Witthoeft will give next Thursday. They will entertian again at a cocktail party the following Thursday, February 9.

MORE SOCIAL NOTES: Miss Helen Davis has visiting her her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. "Pete" Davis, of New York. Mary Bradley will leave next Wednesday for New York, where she will be bridesmaid in a wedding.

Mrs. J. M. Enochs Is Back Home After Pan-American Trip

Mrs. John M. Enochs, who attended the Pan-American Conference in Lima, Peru, remained in Latin America for a series of visits before returning to Washington yesterday.

She accompanied the delegation on its trip back as far as Ecuador and then stopped off there for a visit with the United States Minister and Mrs. Boss Long in their home in Ecuador. From there she went on to Panama to be the guest of Admiral and Mrs. Walter Verou.

While there, she received instructions from the United States Children's Bureau, with which she is connected, to go at once to Costa Rica to confer with officials there in regard to the eighth Pan-American child conference to be held there next summer.

After four days in Costa Rica, she went on to Havana, and while there spent an afternoon with Mrs. J. Butler Wright at the American Embassy. From Havana, Mrs. Enochs came on directly to New York and thence to Washington. During her Latin America sojourn, she wrote a number of articles based on her observations.

Grayce Ringen Becomes Bride

At a ceremony yesterday morning in the First Congregational Church, Miss Grayce Meta Ringen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Marion Ringen, of 2032 Belmont road, became the bride of Cyril Parkinson Turner, son of William F. Turner, of Ottawa, Canada, and the late Mrs. Turner. The bride was given in marriage by her father.

The Rev. Howard S. Anderson officiated at the wedding, which took place at 10 o'clock. A wedding breakfast was served in the Chinese Room of the Mayflower.

The bride wore a trim navy blue traveling suit, set off with a corsage of gardenias. Miss Jesse Spencer Lindsay, of St. Louis, Mo., was maid of honor and only attendant. John Brook Turner was best man.

Mr. and Mrs. Turner are on a honeymoon trip to Miami, Fla. They will make their home here.

Out-of-town guests at the wedding included Mr. and Mrs. George Reiter, of New York, and Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Daiger, of Baltimore.

Farewell Party For Haleys Given By the Stoughs

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond W. Stough were hosts at an informal dinner party last evening at the Shoreham Blue Room in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Norman B. Haley, who are moving to Chicago. Mr. Haley is leaving his post of director of the Bureau of Economic Regulation of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, to become treasurer of the United Airlines Transport Corporation.

Guests included Mr. Haley's associates when he was director of the Bureau of Air Mail in the Interstate Commerce Commission, in the early days of governmental regulation of air activities. Among them were Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Freeland and Mr. and Mrs. Myron Witters.

First Lady Heads Opera Sponsors

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt heads the list of sponsors for the series of grand operas to be given this season, beginning with "The Bartered Bride" on February 13.

Mrs. Carleton Holdredge is chairman of boxes for the series and has assisting her Miss Cornelia M. Bowie, chairman of the opera organization. On Mrs. Holdredge's committee are Mrs. Randolph Minor, Mrs. Laurence V. Benet, Mrs. McCeney Werlich, Mrs. James L. Houghteling, Mrs. Price Whitaker, Mrs. Henry D. Flood, Mrs. Frank Alvah Strong, Countess Cassini, Lady Bradford Leslie, Mme. Woodfin Dranliere, Mrs. Gilbert Hitchcock, Mrs. Guy W. S. Castle, Mrs. William Goodacre, Miss Lydia Loring and Miss Ashby Proctor, the latter of whom is rounding up a group of debutantes to assist in the work.

In contrast to many grand operas which are attended by persons who go to be seen, as well as to see, this series will be enjoyed by a number of guests who are there only to hear. They will be blind persons who will be special guests of Conti Berenguer, musical director. He will give 100 seats for each of the four performances to blind men and women.

Mrs. Ross T. McIntire, attractive wife of the Surgeon General of the Navy, is an indefatigable worker in the cause of the blind and is head of the Washington branch of "Friends of the Moment," the organization that has their interests at heart.

Turrentines Give Third Tea Party

Mr. and Mrs. John W. Turrentine entertained at the third in a series of teas at their home on Cathedral avenue on Tuesday afternoon from 4:30 to 7 o'clock.

Society and Service Turn Out for Birthday Show

President Entertains Brilliant Party in His Box, Including Errol Flynn, of Movie Fame

By Elizabeth Henney

Social notables, high ranking Military and Navy officers and the hunting set turned out over 3,000 strong last evening for the opening of the President's Birthday Horse Show at the Fort Myer riding hall.

Though there was no spotlight turned on him, the center of attention in the President's box was the dashing movie star, Errol Flynn, who later in the show rode one of the President's mounts. Also in the President's box were the new Secretary of Commerce Harry Hopkins, Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, the Chief of Staff, Gen. Malin Craig and Mrs. Craig; Col. George S. Patton, jr., and Mrs. Patton, Miss Ruth Ellen Patton (when she wasn't riding), Maj. Henry Leonard, Commissioner and Mrs. Melvin Hazen.

In the box of Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Albert L. Cox were the new Engineer Commissioner and Mrs. David McCoach, jr., Mrs. McCoach wearing a raspberry satin gown topped by a coat of Persian lamb, and wrapped (as all with forethought were) in a large, warm, woolly blanket. Others in Gen. Cox's box were Senator and Mrs. Scott Lucas, and Mr. and Mrs. Gardner Boothe.

Top hats were visible all through the crowd, and all the finest of furs. But for a fashion writer it would have been a definite strain. The cold weather that perked up the mounts until they were as frisky as colts, kept the audience as muffled as possible in their wraps.

Count Potocki Among Spectators

Noted here and there in the crowd were Mrs. John Hay Whitney in a mink coat, and matching toque; Mrs. Thomas Hickey in an ermine wrap and a gold lame hat, the Polish Ambassador, Count Jerzy Potocki; Col. and Mrs. Lawrence H. Hedrick, Col. E. M. Watson, the President's Military Aide, and the Chief Cavalry, Gen. John K. Herr.

Mrs. T. Q. Donaldson, widow of Gen. Donaldson, was there with her son and daughter-in-law, Capt. and Mrs. T. Q. Donaldson, jr.; also Maj. David Rumbaugh, Mrs. J. H. Collier, Capt. and Mrs. F. A. Garrecht, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Maxwell Murray.

Maj. and Mrs. George H. Millholland were saying good-bys to their friends, for they leave today for temporary duty at Mexico City. Others were Capt. Richard K. McMaster and Lieut. Fletcher Cole.

Debutante Is Star of Evening

The first event of the program in the jumping class was won by Miss Ruth Ellen Patton, daughter of the commandant of Fort Myer. Miss Patton is used to riding up to the judges' stand for a first prize, though, as she has been winning in horse shows since she was a tiny tot. One of the prettiest riding exhibitions during the whole show was negotiated by Miss Margaret Cotter, one of the season's debutantes.

H. Taylor, of Ogden, Utah. The ceremony was performed at 7 o'clock by the Rev. Jesse R. Smith.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of heavy white moire. Her bouquet was of white roses, lilies of the valley and orchids. Mrs. George White, the matron of honor, was in aqua moire made with a hoop skirt. Her headdress was of velvet and silk, and she carried a muff of aqua tulle, trimmed with American beauty roses.

The bridesmaids included Miss Joanna Womeldorpt and Miss Charlotte Elz, both of whom were in hoopskirt dresses of American beauty moire. They carried muffs also of tulle and American beauty roses. Richard Higgins Snow was the best man and the ushers were J. E. Gibson, Norman Bekkedahl and George A. White.

Following the wedding, there was a reception at the home of the bride's parents and later the couple left on their wedding trip. They will make their home in Washington. The bride is a graduate of George Washington University, and is widely known in musical circles here. Mr. Taylor, who also received his degree at George Washington, is employed in the Bureau of Standards.

P.-T. A. to Continue Dental Corrections

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

With 10,000 dental corrections the record for last year's dental demonstration of the D. C. Congress of Parents and Teachers, it was decided yesterday by the health department of the congress to continue the project this year. The response has more than proved its value, according to Mrs. P. C. Ellett, fifth vice president, who is in charge of the health department.

Nearly 60 health chairmen of local parent-teacher associations attended the session called by Mrs. Ellett and held yesterday morning in the board room of the N. E. A. Building on Sixteenth street. They were addressed by Birch Bayh, head of the athletics department of the public schools; Miss Teresa McGee, of the Council of Social Agencies; Mrs. Josephine Prescott, head of the Public Health Nursing Service, and Mrs. William Sweet, of the Free Dental Clinic.

Would Extend Clinic Service

Mrs. Sweet discussed the possibility of extending the srevice of the clinic to children of preschool and junior high school age. At present it is open but two days a week and serves only senior high school students.

Mrs. Evelyn Bright Buckley, chairman of the social hygiene committee, reported on a survey of various Parent-Teacher associations in the city, as to their interest in having a course in social hygiene information for parents, to enable them to present it to their children. The favorable response has resulted, she said, in plans to conduct an institute in the early spring under the auspices of the District congress. The program will include a series of discussion meetings for individual associations.

Summer Round-up To Be Continued

The summer round-up which has been conducted for the past 25 years, encouraging parents to have pre-school children examined by a physician before the opening of the school term in September, will be continued this year under the direction of Mrs. Alma Hudson, chairman, it was announced.

Other chairmen who reported were Mrs. H. E. Duerst, chairman of mental hygiene; Mrs. Lucian Jordan, chairman of child health, and Mrs. M. J. Hanley, chairman of handicapped children.

Mrs. Jordan reported that the District quarantine code, as it applies to communicable diseases, has been sent to the office of the corporation counsel for his opinion as to whether it is enforceable in its present form. For several years Mrs. Jordan has been active in the movement to have this made a measure which could be enforced.

Girls Prepare Scout Dinner

"Girl Scout stew," cooked and served by members of Troop 107, was the chief article on the menu of the supper given last night at the home of Miss Lucy Knox, of College Park, troop captain, for leaders of other senior troops. Her sister, Miss Irene Knox, who has a College Park troop, assisted.

The girls began their preparations at 4 in the afternoon and supper was ready to serve at 6:30. Three long tables were set in the paneled living room, with its large fireplace, to accommodate the 50 guests.

The stew, made from ground beef, kidney beans and peas, was cooked in muffin tins, making individual servings. Mashed potatoes, cole slaw and apple crisp pudding, comprised the rest of the menu, all prepared by the girls. The Scouts were dressed in new uniforms, which they had just finished making as one of their projects. The dresses were of darker green than those they have had before and of a spun rayon material, resembling wool.

After the supper, a round table discussion was led by Miss Dorothy Davidson, Girl Scout director of the District.

The girls of the troop who cooked and served the supper were, Ellen Bennett, June Brown, Mary Brenner, Margaret Clark, Sylvia Click, Vanda Clark, Juliette Columbe, Martha Dalton, Shirley Donatelli, Verona Fulton, Ruth Geran, Norma Harwell, Caroline Jeblick, Mary Lois Lutton, Jane Nicolet, Margaret Paul, Norma Short, Alice Skelton, Alice Olin.

She was admitted to the Illinois bar in 1923, and has practiced law for 14 years in New York, Chicago and Milford, Ill., her home town.

Of Course, Girl Scouts Can Cook

If leaders of Girl Scout troops in the District had any doubt about the ability of the girls to cook, it was dispelled last night when 50 troop leaders were entertained at supper at the home of Miss Lucy Knox in College Park, Md. Two of the 16 girls who prepared the meal are shown at work in the kitchen, Martha Dalton, left, and Jane Nocolet

Mrs. Dudley Again Heads Memorial Aid

Army and Navy Society Assists Service Men Not Eligible to Other Relief

Mrs. Claude Dudley yesterday was elected president, for the eighth year, of the Army and Navy Memorial Aid, which held its annual meeting at the Army and Navy Club.

Other officers include: Mrs. Malin Craig, wife of the Chief of Staff of the Army, and Mrs. William D. Leahy, wife of the Chief of Naval Operations, honorary presidents; Mrs. David J. Rumbough, Mrs. James M. Wheeler, Mrs. E. S. Kellogg, Mrs. Lawrence Tweedy and Mrs. Ellis Knowles, vice presidents; the Washington Loan & Trust Co., treasurer; Col. Gustav Fieberger, assistant treasurer; Miss Julia Fieberger, corresponding secretary; Mrs. H. Young Vetter, recording secretary. Mrs. Rumbough is also chairman of the clothing committee and Mrs. Kellogg of the relief committee.

The board of managers is composed of six members, three of whom are elected annually to serve two years. The new ones are Mrs. Charles D. Roberts, Mrs. Julius A. Furer and Mrs. Clyde Wendelken. The others are Mrs. Claude Miller, Mrs. Roy T. Morris and Mrs. Leon M. Grant.

The society, formed 20 years ago by the late Mrs. James B. Burbank, assists service men and their families not eligible for relief from other agencies, because of limitations in their charters. Cases are referred to it from the other organizations maintained to assist service men and help is given without red tape. The funds of the society come only from dues and memorial gifts.

One of the many cases the society helped this year makes a "stranger-than-fiction" story. An enlisted man, being transferred from one post to another for a short period, was going by motor and did not take his family with him. An accident occurred on the way, he disappeared and was listed as a deserter, automatically disqualifying his destitute family from receiving aid from the Army Relief Society. It referred them to the Memorial Society, which was appealed to by the wife to search for her husband. She insisted he was ill somewhere, that he would not have deserted either the Army or his family. An investigation was instituted, he was located, found to have suffered amnesia following the accident in which his head was injured, and, on Christmas day, just past, he was restored to his family as well as to his Army status.

C. of C. Parley Here Favors Farm Subsidy

'Bonus' Should Bring 'Fair Price,' Davis Declares After Talk

Abandonment of extensive machinery for control of agriculture, and a straight subsidy to farmers on production for domestic use, were favored at a conference yesterday of about 50 farm and industrial leaders under auspices of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

George H. Davis, of Kansas City president of the chamber, declared prevailing sentiment at the conference was that farmers should receive a "fair price" for that part of agricultural commodities consumed in this country.

The difference between a fair price and the prevailing market price, he explained, would be made up by a Government subsidy or "bonus" paid direct to producers.

Although the conference, held behind closed doors, took no formal action, he said the majority of those present felt that distribution of agricultural commodities should be left to private facilities.

"The general view," he said, "was that subsidy payments should not be coupled with a plan for crop control. Farmers would be permitted to raise as large crops as they want."

He said there was strong sentiment among the conferees against price-fixing.

Jackson Defends Increase in Power At Washington

Raleigh, N. C., Jan. 25 (U.P.).—Solicitor General Robert H. Jackson tonight defended increased Federalization of Government as necessary to the preservation of the American economic structure and denounced those who would "fan jealousies between the States and the Nation."

In an address at a banquet in honor of the North Carolina State Legislature, Jackson said that raising the issues of "Federal invasion" "State's rights" and "usurpation" was "a time-honored political method of confusing issues and blocking programs of service to the people."

Jackson denied that the present Administration was seeking to invade local and State fields of activity.

Opera's Right to Use Recording Discs Upheld

New York, Jan. 25 (AP).—The right of an opera company to use electrically transcribed discs in place of an orchestra was upheld in State Supreme Court today in a case which both sides described as the first legal test of the issue.

Justice Kenneth O'Brien enjoined the A. F. L. stage employes and musicians unions from further interference with Opera-On-Tour, Inc., which was forced to discontinue productions last fall because of a strike called by the unions.

Scandiffio Succeeds Selders As Price Returns to G. H. A.

Pediatrician, Who Was Ousted by District Medical Society, Selected by Group Health as Director of I Street Clinic

Dr. Richard H. Price's withdrawal of his resignation from the Group Health Association medical staff, and the election of Dr. Mario Scandiffio as acting medical director, were outstanding developments in the group health situation yesterday.

One day after the resignation of Dr. Raymond E. Selders as medical director, effective immediately, Dr. Price informed the board of trustees that "since I am convinced that the conditions about the operation of the GHA clinic with which I was dissatisfied are being remedied, I would like to withdraw my resignation and remain with Group Health Association."

When he submitted his resignation two weeks ago, effective January 31, Dr. Price complained that patients were "herded like sheep" and made other criticisms of clinic procedure.

Believes in Principles

"I firmly believe," he wrote the trustees yesterday, "in the principles of co-operative group practice and wish to do everything I can to contribute to the success of the Group Health Association."

His message was sent from a sick bed. He is expected to return to duty in a day or two.

Dr. Cameron G. Garman, newly elected president of GHA, replied as follows, in behalf of the board:

"The board of trustees is glad to learn you have reconsidered your resignation and will be pleased to have you remain on the Group Health Association staff. We are sure your many friends among the members will rejoice to learn of your decision."

Dr. Scandiffio Chosen Director

Preivously the trustees had instructed the ten-man medical staff to choose one of their number to act as director of the 1328 I street clinic, pending selection of a permanent head. They picked Dr. Scandiffio, a pediatrician, who was ousted from the District Medical Society last year because of his professional association with GHA.

The child specialist appealed his expulsion and is awaiting a decision by the judicial council of the American Medical Association.

The disciplinary action taken against Dr. Scandiffio, together with that meted out to Dr. Selders by the Harris County (Texas) Medical Society, was responsible in part for the grand jury investigation which culminated last month in the indictment of the American Medical Association, three member societies and 21 individual physicians.

Following the first two jumping events, the pick of the President's own stable paraded around the hall. They were led by the stable's mascot Lady Luck, tiny gray Shetland pony, owned by Miss Sarah Roosevelt, daughter of James Roosevelt. Others were Dot, Mrs. Roosevelt's favorite and once the property of an officer in the New York State mounted police; New Deal, presented to the President by a Missouri friend; Natoma, bred from a Norwegian mare and Arab stallion, and Pal-O-Mine, descendant of a strain once the favorite of early Spanish setilers in New Mexico.

Following these came Jeanne D'Arc, 32-year-old veteran warhose, and last survivor of the A. E. F. The mare wore service stripes on her left flank, and the six combat stars won in the World War.

With all the precision of a trained ballet, 24 riders from Troop E of the Third Cavalry, trained by Capt. D. L. Hotel Comes Clean With D. C. Man's $230

Allan T. Sawyer, a field analyst for the Farm Credit Administration here, placed $230 for safe keeping in the pillowcase of his Omaha hotel room Tuesday night.

He checked out this morning, the Associated Press reported yesterday, but did not remember until two hours later that his money was still in the pillowcase. A search led to the hotel laundry where Sawyer's $230, freshly laundered, was still wrapped in the case.

Doctor Threatened With Jail as Jury Tamperer In Recent Indictments Against Medical 'Trust'

The Government yesterday invoked a little-used statute for a counter attack on the American Medical Association, which accused the Justice Department of hampering its defense against charges of conspiracy in restraint of trade.

This action was in answer to complaints of "unseemly and unlawful behavior" and a demand for access to records of the grand jury which indicted the association, 21 doctors, the District Medical Society, the Washington Academy of Surgery and the Harris County (Texas) Medical Society for alleged monopolistic practices.

Justice Proctor in District Court took under advisement the doctors' demand for access to records of testimony heard by the Grand Jury in nine weeks of investigation. Also sought was the right to question the grand jurors, privately and in court, about evidence they heard and about whether Government attorneys harangued them to vote an indictment.

The Government's reply to this demand was to accuse one physician of writing to the Grand Jury November 6, urging it not to return an indictment; again November 13, asking that no indictment be returned, and again December 9. The jury brought its indictment December 20.

The indictment ought to be quashed, Defense Attorney Seth W. Richardson told the court, if the four special assistants to the Attorney General coerced the jurors, or if unlawful evidence was heard in the locked and guarded sessions of the secret grand jury. Attorney Charles C. Baker swore to a statement that the records were needed to enable the defense to attack the indictment. Baker said he was informed several grand jurors wished to talk to defense counsel but were afraid to.

Richardson pointed out only three sources could tell what went on in the secret hearings—the prosecutors, who refused; the grand jurors, who were afraid, and the transcript, which the prosecutors had sequestered. He described many of the witnesses in the investigation as "long-nosed busybodies," whose views were reported in the newspapers while the Government concealed the most reliable record.

Richardson condemned the prosecutors for quoting a long letter they said one of the accused physicians, who was not named in court, sent to the grand jury. The letter said, in part:

Here is the whole situation in a nutshell. Organized medicine regards the advent of Group Health, Incorporated, as a clever move on the part of the Left Wing of the New Deal who have never had to face an electorate and whose social views have been repudiated by the electorate in the last election . . .

We contend, and I think rightfully so, that if Congress wants to amend the anti-trust laws so that they apply to medical practice, that is the business of Congress and not the Public Prosecutor.

The Government's answer commented that "the Department of Justice now had under consideration the prosecution of this said defendant (the letter writer) under section 243, Title 18, United States Code, and under the case of Duke against the United States (90 Fed 2d 840), on account of the foregoing letters, for tampering with the additional grand jury."

The section referred to provides: "Whoever shall attempt to influence the action or decision of any grand or petty juror of any court of the United States upon any issue or matter pending before such juror, or before the jury of which he is a member, or pertaining to his duties, by writing or sending to him any letter or any communication, in print or writing, in relation to such issue or matter, shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisonment for not more than six months, or both."

The answer also said that the letter writer has questioned grand jurors since they were dismissed and that one of them asked the department for protection.

Richardson said these matters had nothing to do with the right of the Government to keep on hiding what went on or trying to stretch the obligation of secrecy so as to muzzle the grand jurors after they were dismissed.

Justice Proctor commented that he "never intended to give the impression of extending the grand jury oath beyond the proper valid period of secrecy."

Richardson said that if the defendants were confined to the text of the indictment and could not go behind it, they would be helpless against any improper practice.

Douglas Maggs, special assistant to the Attorney General, replied that the defense was trying to organize a "fishing expedition." He said few instances of wrongdoing in the grand jury room ever had been proved because of the secrecy that surrounded such proceedings. He said the proposal to question the grand jurors meant to expose them "to the same sort of harassment to which a juror in this case already has been subjected. Impropriety already has occurred."

Justice Proctor asked for written notes on the authorities and said he would prepare a decision.

The defense attorneys said they did not know the identity of the physician who was threatened with prosecution.

Johnson Odd Fellows' Grand Master

Hiram Evalyn Johnson was elected grand master of the Grand Lodge of the International Order of Odd Fellows of the District at its annual session in the I. O. O. F. Temple at 419 Seventh street northwest last night.

The session, attended by 460 past grands and Representatives of the grand body, also elected Ashlan F. Harlan, deputy grand master; Ernest L. Loving, grand warden; Harry L. Andresen, grand secretary; A. B. Keefer, grand treasurer; Wilfred E. Lawson, grand representative to the sovereign grand lodge for a two-year term; Chalmers F. Groff and Herman F. Heffley, representative to the grand lodge board of trustees; Lemuel H. Windsor, representative to the board of trustees of the temple, and J. Burton Kincer, representative to the I. O. O. F. Home Association.

Andresen will serve his sixteenth consecutive term as grand secretary.

The retiring grand master, Arlington S. Custer, made his annual report along with the reports of Andresen, Charles Brown Lampe, retiring grand treasurer, and Grand Representatives Lawson and Kincer.

Johnson is a native of Washington and a descendant of early Virginia and Maryland settlers. He attended Thomson and Franklin schools which were close to the home at Massachusetts avenue and Twelfth street where his maternal ancestors had lived since the early 1800's. He graduated from Business High School and attended Central High School. He is now employed in the War Department.

He was initiated in the Odd Fellows by Brightwood Lodge in 1927, and a year later became the lodge's recording secretary, a position he held until his election as noble grand in 1930. At the annual session of the grand lodge of the District in 1934 he was appointed grand instructor by Grand Master Charles B. Lampe and by successive grand masters he was named grand marshal and grand guardian. He was elected grand warden in 1937 and deputy grand master in 1938.

Segregation Of Tubercular Parents Urged

The only way to stop children dying of tuberculosis is to separate them from the parents from whom they get the infection, Dr. A. Barklie Coulter, director of the Chest Clinic, told the advisory committee on handicapped children of the Board of Education last night at a meeting in the Franklin Administration Building.

Primary infection of tuberculosis is fairly common among children, said Dr. Coulter, but is not dangerous unless the child is subjected to "overwhelming" infection, which commonly comes from contact with tubercular parents, and then the disease develops in an acute form, with death coming so swiftly that little can be done by hospitalization.

On the other hand, many children have been cured of tuberculosis when separated from their parents, only to be fatally reinfected on their return to their homes.

Dr. Coulter urged that hospitalization of persons carrying contagious diseases be made legally compulsory. He pointed out that the number of people with tuberculosis in Washington is ten times the number who die in a year.

Undernourished school children, Dr. Coulter said, should be given special care, but not segregated. He recommended rest rooms for children of delicate health, whether through a permanent condition or because they were convalescent; so that they could get maximum schooling without injury to their health. Such children often could be better cared for at school than at home, he said.

Dr. Coulter said that, although economic conditions after the Civil War had raised the death rate from tuberculosis among colored people far above its earlier low level, since 1885 it has become parallel to the death rate among the white population. This, he said, is a social more than a medical problem.

Dr. Charles W. Pimper, chairman, read a report of the visit to the Baltimore schools by the sub-committee on crippled children on January 16.

Tenant Who Kept Much to Himself Is Found Hanged

The door to 65-year-old Edwin Tuttle's apartment at 405 Tenth street northeast was left unlocked last night for the first time in months.

Thurston Saul, resident manager, pushed the door open and found Tuttle's body hanging from a clothesline tied to a bedpost.

Police said they found a sealed note addressed to Charles Morris, New Haven, Conn., believed to be a relative.

Saul told police Tuttle had rarely been seen by his neighbors in the five years he had lived in the apartment. In the last few months, he said, Tuttle had kept his door locked, opening it only for persons whose voices he recognized. Saul said he went to the apartment to inquire about an accumulation of milk bottles at the door.

Hunt Charges Fascism Rules Often in U. S.

PWA Counsel Declarer Civil Rights of Poor Are Trampled Upon

Government in America has, at one time or another, been "fascist in large degree," Henry T. Hunt, PWA general counsel and former mayor of Cincinnati, told a meeting of the B'nai B'rith at the Jewish Community Center last night. He spoke on "Democracy and Civil Liberty Today."

Police methods in many cities, he said, are one example of violation of civil liberties bordering on fascism.

The bill of rights in the American Constitution, he said, was not a gift of its framers but the result of a demand from the States and their people. These people, he declared, "despite manifold political disadvantages to the opponents of ratification, elected conventions which refused to ratify until proponents promised to amend the Constitution by adding a bill of rights at the first session of Congress."

Hunt blamed the success of Hitler in the recent conquests by Germany on England and France. English industrialists, he said, "in alliance with English aristocrats . . . supported by French desire" to subjugate Germany, "made this Frankenstein, which they now seek vainly to mollify."

Heflin's Push May Free 2, Held In Safe Theft

Assistant District Attorney Cecil Heflin pushed a safe along a platform yesterday, upset a police theory that its theft was necessarily a four-man job and possibly pushed two men out of jail.

Carmon J. Quantrille and Henry Milton were convicted of making off with a safe in 1927 from the Washington Beef and Provision Company. Recently Charles Smith and Albert Gray confessed that they carried off the safe themselves.

Heflin visited the company's warehouse at 110 E street southwest and easily rolled the safe along on its casters. Now attorneys for Quantrille and Milton believe the court will put sufficient faith in Smith and Gray's alleged confession to grant their clients, now serving time, new trials.

Transocean Plane Licensed by U. S.

Airways intends to use in transatlantic service.

The Civil Aeronautics Authority issued a license last night for a 40-ton flying boat which Pan-American Airways intend to use in transatlantic service.

The approved type certificate provided for 80,000 pounds gross weight, carrying 74 passengers in daytime operation and 40 at night. Tests of the ship were completed recently at Seattle, Wash.

The CAA said the ship would leave Seattle at daylight today for Astoria, Oreg., where its builders, the Boeing Co., will transfer the title to Pan-American.

House Veterans To Guide D.C.'s Important Bills

Nichols Heads Fiscal Affairs Sub-Committee, Kennedy Reorganization

The two most important legislative problems facing the House District Committee this session were turned over to sub-committees, chiefly of veteran members, yesterday as the committee organized for the year.

Representative Jack Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, who handled the District revenue bill last year, was named chairman of the fiscal affairs sub-committee. The local reorganization study, not yet released, went to a sub-committee headed by Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland.

Representative McGehee (Democrat), of Mississippi, who also had served on the tax sub-committee, was assigned to both sub-committees. Nichols was placed on Kennedy's sub-committee as well.

Representatives Dirksen, of Illinois, and Bates, of Massachusetts, are the Republican members of both sub-committees.

Two bills that passed the House last year were reported favorably by the committee upon recommendation of Chairman Randolph. One seeks to restore two former policemen, Ralph S. Warner and David Thompson, to duty, and the other aims to tighten the District law relating to first-degree murder committed in the perpetration of a felony.

Plans to Build 'Skyscrapers' Stir Staid Mass. Ave.

Whether Massachusetts avenue, one of the last frontiers of Washington's society cave dwellers, should make further concessions to the twentieth century or not will be discussed by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission at its monthly meeting today and tomorrow. The agenda for tomorrow includes the question of extending the maximum height for buildings between Dupont and Scott circles from 60 to 90 feet, or skyscraper altitude in Washington.

In this strip of Massachusetts avenue are the Belgian and Peruvian embassies, the Canadian Legation, the Sulgrave Club, the homes of many wealthy dowagers, and Jehovah's Witnesses headquarters.

Today's sessions will be devoted to land purchase items, park and recreation plans, the proposed armory and sports center at the foot of East Capitol street, and co-operation with the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

Tomorrow afternoon's session will be a joint meeting with the Fine Arts Commission.

McReynolds Asks Lewis For Details

Complains Report Alleging Relief Chiseling in D. C. Lacks Vital Facts

Investigation by the Board of Public Welfare, Frederick W. McReynolds, board chairman, declared yesterday, shows that the Lewis report on local relief omits facts of major importance in citing instances of fraud and "chiseling" among District relief clients.

At the same time, he emphasized that the board was having great difficulty in identifying cases listed in the report prepared under direction of Burdette G. Lewis, District relief investigator. Real names or case number identifications are not used in the report.

McReynolds said he had tried repeatedly to have fraud and chiseling cases which Lewis feels he has uncovered submitted to the board in order that investigation could be made and the recipients dropped from the rolls.

Congress Given Details

The citizens' supervisory committee conducting the investigation, however, has submitted details of the findings to the House and Senate sub-committees on District appropriations. The board, it is said, has been furnished only with portions of the Lewis report as it has been released piecemeal for publication.

Lewis declared that the board did not have to have the names and case numbers. The case worker and the supervisor having charge of the particular case load can identify the cases from the information given, he insisted.

McReynolds, however, said the board has had to investigate 6,000 cases and that "a great deal of similarity appears among them."

Board Under Probe

He declared that, in order to stop waste, the board should be given assistance to enable it to correct what is so roundly criticized in the Lewis report.

Names and case numbers of cases investigated by Lewis' staff, it is understood, have been withheld from the board on the ground that the board was being investigated. As a result, findings have been submitted, not to the agency under investigation, but to the proper committees of Congress, it is asserted.

Lewis said that, following publication of various installments of his report, he had received a "bushel" of new complaints.

DR. MARY J. RATHBUN

Dr. Rathbun, Noted Zoologist, Works for U. S. Without Pay

Writer of 158 Treatises on Crab Life 'Resigned' in 1913 But Her Daily Services Continue (Sans Salary) at Smithsonian

[The Biblical "three score and ten" has been interpreted as a working span, not a life's limit, by the men and women whose accomplishments will be described in this series. Forty, fifty and more years they have been producing and they're recognizing no "stop" light now. Some of them you must know yourself. Don't keep their names a secret. Let us know your candidates for "Life Begins at 70."—Editor's note.]

By Gerald G. Gross.

For the last 26 years a tiny wisp of a woman, who will be 79 in June, has been working for the United States Government for nothing. Not as a "consultant" or somesuch, who furnishes technical advice when called upon, but as an 8:30-to-3:30 daily toiler who brings her lunch to the office that she may lose a minimum of time from her duties.

Ordinarily it requires an act of Congress to authorize acceptance of a private gift to the nation or allow someone to serve the Government for $1 a year but that formality apparently was dispensed with in the case of Dr. Mary J. Rathbun, one of the world's leading authorities on crabs and an honorary associate in zoology of the National Museum, Smithsonian Institution.

It was not Miss Rathbun who mentioned her volunteer service but the scientist who, without his knowledge, was responsible for her quitting the Federal pay roll in 1913 in order to strengthen the museum's division of marine invertebrates with another helper—Dr. Waldo L. Schmitt. But for her act, he might be an unknown today and the division a mediocre one instead of one of the four greatest on earth.

There were no heroics about her self-elimination from the pay roll. The facts were simply these: In 1913, after 26 years in the Smithsonian, it became plain to her that a research assistant must be had. Until then she had been the whole division but the collection was growing too fast for the indefinite continuance of solo work.

Told that no funds were available to hire an extra hand, Miss Rathbun quietly announced her intention to yield her salary—but keep right on working—thus releasing funds to employ a promising young scientist who had assisted her a few years earlier. She resigned in 1913 and in the following year Dr. Schmitt came to the division of marine invertebrates from the Department of Agriculture.

It was her brother, Dr. Richard Rathbun, destined to become head of the National Museum in later years, who aroused her interest in zoology when she was a girl in her 'teens. After several years as his volunteer assistant, she was appointed to the Smithsonian's scientific staff in 1887.

Since that time she has published 158 books and articles, including a masterful treatise on fresh water crabs of the world in four volumes, and a four-volume monograph on marine crabs of North and South America. She has gone to Europe for scientific research and to arrange for specimen exchanges—at her own expense.

The only time Dr. Rathbun ever put her professional duties aside was during the World War, when she made bandages at the Red Cross station in Georgetown. She has not only been a Georgetown resident ever since coming to Washington but occupied the same suite in the same apartment house, Hammond Court, at Thirtieth and Q streets.

And here is an ironic sidelight: In the past quarter-century, while Dr. Rathbun has been donating her peerless services gratis to the Government, she has never received notice of a rent increase, though rents have gone up markedly in the interim.

Dr. Rathbun was born in Buffalo, N. Y., on June 11, 1860, and educated at the University of Pittsburgh and George Washington University. She was a brilliant student of English.

Not long ago a girls' college sent her a questionnaire asking what are the qualifications of a successful woman scientist.

"The first requisite," Dr. Rathbun replied, "is a thorough knowledge of the English language."

Dr. Joseph A. Cushman, noted geologist and Harvard lecturer, in dedicating his monumental book on foraminifera (microscopic shelled animals) to her in 1928, said:

"To Dr. Mary J. Rathbun, who more than any other person is responsible for starting my serious work on the foraminifera 25 years ago, with hope that the confidence then shown has not been a source of disappointment, and with my best wishes."

Dr. Schmitt, her more immediate protege, pays reverential tribute to her ability, tact and system. With a feeling of awe he tells how she wrote thousands of record cards in the early days, most of which are still in use; once rowed to work when a flood made streets impassable to wheeled traffic; labeled thousands of specimen bottles in her delicate Spencerian hand.

"Not the least of her contributions," he points out, "is the presentation of her scientific library to the division. Most of these books are indispensable."

The only reason Dr. Rathbun leaves her office at 3:30 p. m. daily, rather than waiting until 4:30, is that a relative stops by at that time to drive her home.

France Seeks to Buy 350 More U. S. Planes

Representatives of the French government are negotiating for the purchase of 350 military planes from American aircraft manufacturers, authoritative sources said yesterday.

While contracts have not been signed, it was stated that both bombers and pursuit ships are sought. Last year, the French army purchased 100 Curtiss-Wright pursuit planes.

D. C. Citizens Offer Own Tax Program

Hit Commissioner's Plan to Levy 2% on Sales and Demand Ability-to-Pay Basis

The Citizens Committee for Fair Taxation in the District of Columbia, composed of representatives of civic, labor and consumer organizations, last night at a special meeting in the Y. W. C. A. voiced its disapproval of the 2 per cent sales tax proposal and further adoption of "regressive taxes" that have been made by the Commissioners' Advisory Committee.

The committee opposed the numerous tax proposals which have been made by the taxation committee to meet the impending deficit for the fiscal year, 1940. They also apposed any type of sales tax or other levy not based on the ability to pay.

The citizens proposed the following tax program:

(1) Repeal of the "business privileve" tax on gross receipts of corporations and individuals doing business in the District. This is an indirect sales tax which is passed on to the consumer wherever possible.

(2) Enactment of the corporation profits tax on the net profits reported by the corporation of the District on their Federal income tax returns as adjusted by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue—this tax to replace the existing privilege tax measured by gross sales.

(3) Enactment of a graduated personal income tax on all incomes earned in the District with such exemptions as will safeguard the living standards of those least able to pay.

(4) Repeal of the intangible personal property tax—only if there is substituted for it a graduated tax on personal net income.

The committee estimated that the tax program of the commissioner's committee would more than meet estimated needs of the District.

JOE LOUIS WINS ON TECHNICAL K. O. IN FIRST

Lewis Floored Three Times Before Referee Stops Bout in 2:29

John Henry Helpless at End Before 18,000; Joe Batters Foe From Start of Bout; Bomber Defends His Title for Fifth Time

By the Associated Press.

Madison Square Garden, New York, N. Y., Jan. 25.—A ruthless, smashing killer with as much mercy as a bombing plane, Joe Louis blasted John Henry Lewis into submission in less than three minutes tonight to successfully defend his world heavyweight championship for the fifth time.

The most dangerous puncher since Dempsey just about tore the head off the challenger with vicious right hooks as he battered John Henry all over the ring almost from the first second on. Joe dropped him for counts of two and three, and then smashed him to the floor again.

There John Henry lay, helpless and goggle-eyed, as Referee Arthur Donovan counted five, before deciding to halt the contest, with Louis the winner and still champion by a technical knockout in 2 minutes 29 seconds of the first round.

The champion, a 1-to-10 favorite to keep the title in this first all-Negro heavyweight championship bout in the United States history, followed just the course of campaign he had planned.

He wasn't fooled for an instant by the vaunted Lewis' boxing skill, and he went right out to complete the evening's chores as quickly as possible, against a man who is his personal friend everywhere but in the prize ring.

Second Fastest Bout

How well the crushing fists of the stolid slugger succeeded is evidenced by the fact that the knockout came in one of the fastest times in heavyweight championship history. Available records show the only faster finish was registered by the Brown Bomber when he annihilated Max Schmeling in 2:02 of the first round of their bout last summer. Tonight's contest, like that one, was slated for 15 rounds.

Louis entered the ring with a long pull in the weights, scaling 200½ to the challenger's 180¾, but he didn't need that particular advantage or any other besides his mighty punching artillery.

Apparently willing to believe the stories he had heard of the classy boxing skill of Lewis, who is still recognized in National Boxing Association territory as light-heavyweight champion, Jolting Joe sparred cautiously for the first 10 or 15 seconds, leading only with a light left.

Suddenly he leaped forward as the crowd of 17,350, who contributed to a gross gate of $102,015.43, roared. He drove the challenger into a neutral corner and smashed over a fearful right hook full to the jaw. That punch marked the beginning of the end, for, although John Henry took it without falling, his knees sagged and his eyes became glassy.

From that point it was just a question of how much more he could take before the inevitable ending. Another smashing right swing dropped him for the first time. He was up at the count of two, and later, in his dressing room, he was unable to say why he didn't take the full nine count.

Lewis Felt Funny

"I felt funny all of a sudden," he explained—which may be another form of describing how the roof falls in when Louis sends his "death in the evening" toward a rival.

On arising, the Phoenix, Ariz., battler (by way of Pittsburgh) tried to keep out of firing range, but Joe was in on him like a bolt of lightning. Two more rights and some three or four left hooks to the body draped John Henry over the bottom strand of the ropes, where he swayed until the count reached three. Then he came up again.

He countered Louis' next charge with a hook to the body, the only clean blow he landed during the brief battle, and then was battered along the ropes, helpless and defenseless, under an unmerciful onslaught, before the final right rocked him to the floor, near a neutral corner.

John Henry later said he was in full possession of his faculties and could have arisen and continued, but to all observers in the near capacity crowd, it appeared that Referee Donovan did well in stopping the fight right there. Another of those rocket-like rights might have done him more than slight injury.

Louis' dressing room was packed immediately after the bout. In silence, he posed for photographers and shook the hands of well-wishers.

Not Hit, Says Louis

"I didn't think he hit me at all," he explained to fight writers later. "It was an easy fight—I just worked up a light sweat, and that was mostly from the lights."

The crowd and gate was a tribute to the lure Joe's awful punching power has for the fight fans. With tonight's financial gross, the Detroit dynamiter now has fought four times in Madison Square Gar-

J. H. Lewis Family Has No Alibis

Phoenix, Ariz., Jan. 25 (U.P.).—There were no alibis and no excuses in the home of John Henry Lewis here tonight—just sadness.

The challenger's mother said it was "tough luck."

Here's How It Happened

By the Associated Press.

ROUND ONE—They came out cautiously. Each missed a light left jab after they circled about the ring. Joe missed a left hook. Joe backed John back into the challenger's corner and landed both hands to the body. A right hook sent John down for a count of two.

The champion sent both hands to the head time and again and John staggered. Donovan parted the two in John's corner. The challenger threw a left hook to the body and was draped over the ropes for a count of two. Louis threw a right to the head and the challenger was helpless.

Another two-handed barrage dropped John Henry to the floor along the ropes. He was goggle-eyed and all but unconscious and after Referee Donovan reached a count of five he decided to halt the bout and awarded the champion the victory by a technical knockout.

Friendship Ends in Ring, Says Louis

By the United Press.

New York, Jan. 25.—Friendship ends where business begins, so Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis said he had to go out tonight and get his work done as quickly as possible.

"John Henry's my good friend and all of that, but in this business you can't let anything stand in your way when you step into the ring," Joe said in his dressing room 10 minutes after he left it to defend the title.

Over next door, in the Lewis dressing room, a white-haired Negro looked at the beaten hulk that sprawled there on a bench and said:

"I thought he was better'n that. He'd never been knocked out before, and I didn't think Joe could do it."

The speaker was John Edward Lewis, father of the challenger.

"I can't understand why he didn't take a count that first time he went down," he continued. "His head might have cleared if he'd stayed there."

John Henry, dazed and battered, never knew he went down that third and last time.

"I don't see why they stopped it. They give you three knockdowns in other States, don't they?" John Henry said.

He was told that he was down three times.

"Was I? I don't remember," he said.

Asked why he didn't stay down for a count of nine the first time Louis clipped him, John Henry said:

"I didn't see the punch that hit me. I wasn't hurt, though, so I got up. The first thing I knew after I had been hit was when I was on the floor."

The champion wasn't marked at all, and looked as if he were getting

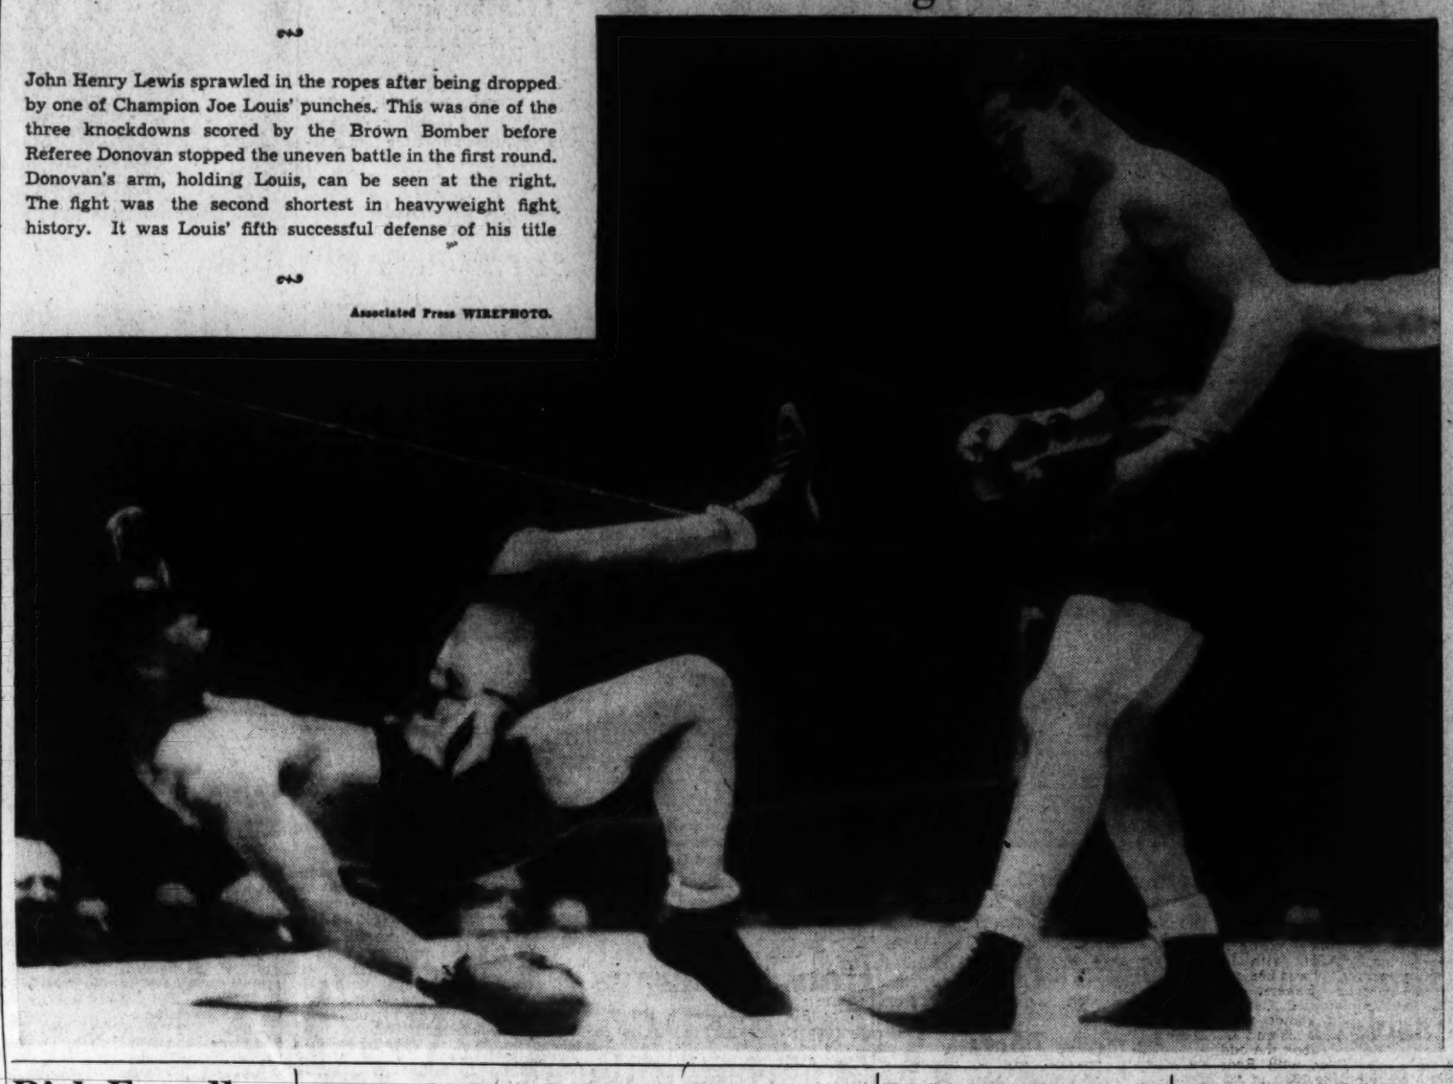
When 'Roof Fell in' on Lewis in Last Night's Titular Bout



John Henry Lewis sprawled in the ropes after being dropped by one of Champion Joe Louis' punches. This was one of the three knockdowns scored by the Brown Bomber before Referee Donovan stopped the uneven battle in the first round. Donovan's arm, holding Louis, can be seen at the right. The fight was the second shortest in heavyweight fight history. It was Louis' fifth successful defense of his title

Rick Ferrell, No. 1 catcher of the Washington Club for the past two years, brought to an end reports that he was salary holdout by returning his signed contract for the 1939 season to the Nats yesterday.

In the same mail with Ferrell's contract were the signed papers of Ben Geraghty, rookie infielder who is slated to be returnd to one of the Nats' minor league farms. Ferrell and Geraghty brought to 24 the number of Nats now under contract for 1939.

Notable among the Washington players who have not yet signed are Second Baseman Buddy Myer, and Pitchers Pete Appleton, Monte Weaver and Jimmy DeShong.

McCoys Defeat Hatfields, 17-5.

Matewan, W. Va., Jan. 25 (AP).—The Hatfields and the McCoys renewed their feudin' tonight in a basketball battle. The McCoys won 17 to 5 without physical clashes—but the game that followed on a double-header program broke up in a fuss.

When the Hatfield and McCoy clans left the floor Burch and Matewan high schools took it.

Coach Henry Justice of Burch took his team from the floor in the last 3 minutes of play with the score 19-18 his way, charging roughness and forfeiting the encounter to Matewan.

The Hatfield-McCoy encounter by contrast was exceedingly peaceful.

Flynn Is Unplaced In Fort Myer Show

Actor Has No Luck in Birthday Ball Benefit Event Before President and 3,000 Other Fans

Fort Myer horses and riders heaped honors on honors last night at the President's Birthday Horse Show staged at the military post before a fashionable gathering of 3,000 tanbark fans headed by President and Mrs. Roosevelt.

The list of notables was not confined to the box seats, but extended full into the show ring of the Fort Myer riding hall. There the gathering saw Errol Flynn, famed Hollywood actor, ride as a competitor in the class for park or road hacks.

Mr. Flynn, a horseman since early youth in his native England, had the mount on John Roosevelt's half-bred hunter, Badger. His stylish seat evoked the applause of the crowd, but Flynn was unplaced in the event, which was won by Blakely Lodge, on U. S. Randle's well-mannered Randle's Find.

At the conclusion of the event, Flynn, who is in Washington as a White House guest in connection with the President's Birthday Ball for the infantile paralysis fund, was presented with a silver cup by Mrs. Roosevelt in an impressive ceremony.

The first class of the show, for hunters, saw Fort Myer score a complete victory. The winner was Keonakolu, Hawaiian-named bay gelding owned by Mrs. George S. Patton, wife of the commanding officer of the post, and ridden by their daughter, Miss Ruth Ellen Patton.

Capt. Henri Luebbermann, of Fort Myer, earned the applause of the throng when he displayed his versatility in the open hunters and handy jumpers class.

Capt. Luebbermann, who had suffered a hard fall while riding with the Fort Myer Show team in an earlier event, returned to the ring to take fourth honors in the open hunters class. Then he followed up with a clever victory in the handy jumpers event, topping a field of more than 20 of the best open jumpers of this section.

Miss Lisbeth Stieg was another to win hearty applause. An impressive figure on her high-bouncing chestnut mare, Hi-Ho, Miss Stieg saw a perfect performance marred in the handy class when the mare lost her course.

A fetaure of the show was an exhibition of the string of horses kept at Fort Myer by the President, for the use of his family and White House guests. These were New Deal, a five-gaited Missouri saddle horse; Dot, Mrs. Roosevelt's favorite hack; Natoma, a buckskin mare bred by the President's uncle, Warren Delano; Badger and Pal o' Mine, John Roosevelt's two good ones, and Jeanne de Arc, a war veteran of 32, who displayed her wound and service stripes.

Margaret Cotter, hard-riding Washington debutante of the season, won the hotly contested open-jumping class on her Rocksie after a jump-off with Capt. Kenneth Hoge's Broomfield that had the spectators cheering. War-whooping Miss Cotter went twice around the tricky course without a fault.

In winning the class she evened up the score made in the December show at the post when Broomfield won the touch and out class and Rocksie placed second.

Billy Do continued his winning ways by winning his third consecutive jumping ribbon in as many classes when he placed third in the opening jumping.

Lisbeth Steig had another streak of bad luck when she lost her course for the second time in one evening. Her mount, Hi-Ho, was performing faultlessly in the open jumping class when she headed into the wrong fence and was automatically disqualified.

Five Picked For Olympic Skating Team

By the Associated Press.

Oconomowoc, Wis., Jan. 25.—A Californian and four Middle Westerners had berths of the eight-man 1940 American Olympics skating squad tonight as team trials neared their conclusion.

George Wallace, San Francisco machinist engineer, made the team by capturing the 1,500-meter race, third on the four-event program. He won both heats, the first in 2 minutes 21.8 seconds and the second (today) in 2:27.6 for an average of 2:24.7.

Delbert Lamb of Milwaukee, a member of the 1936 team, won a place by finishing third in the 500-meter race and second in the 1,500. His average for the former was 44.7 seconds, for the latter 2:27.95. He was clocked at 2:30.3 today.

Fifth place on the team went to Charles Leighton of Minneapolis, by virtue of his performances in the 500, 1,500 and 5,000 races. He was eighteenth in the 500 with an average time of 47.1 seconds, fifth in the 1,500 with a 2:30.35 average, and third in the 5,000, in which his average was 9:03.5.

St. John's Meets Gonzaga Tonight

The Catholic Prep School title will probably be decided tonight when Gonzaga and St. John's meet at Tech High Gymnasium in one of the outstanding games of the scholastic season. The game will start at 8:15 o'clock.

In a preliminary at 7:15, St. Paul's will clash with St. Anthony's for the little Catholic High School championship.

Having beaten Gonzaga for three straight years, the Johnnies will be heavy favorites tonight although they do not appear to have as good a team as the one which swept to a city title last season.

Vines Defeats Budge Third Straight Time

Chapel Hill, N. C., Jan. 25 (U.P.).—Ellsworth Vines tonight won his third straight victory over Donald Budge in their professional tennis series, turning back the California Redhead, 4—6, 7—5, 7—5.

The defeat still left Budge with a 10-to-7 lead in number of matches played since their present tour began soon after Budge turned professional.

Sabin, Mako Advance In Florida's Tennis

West Palm Beach, Fla., Jan. 25 (AP).—The possibility of a fourth Wayne Sabin-Gene Mako match loomed today as each player advanced toward the finals of the South Florida Tennis Tournament.

Top-seeded Mako, from Los Angeles, disposed of Bruce Thomas, of West Palm Beach, in love sets. Sabin, registered from Portland, Oreg., defeated Richard Harris, of West Palm Beach, 6—3, 6—4. Both were third-round matches.

Lou Gehrig Takes Slight Pay Slash

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 25.—Lou Gehrig, who has played first base for the New York Yankees in 2,122 consecutive games, today signed a contract calling for a salary of between $30,000 and $39,000 for 1939, his fifteenth season with the world champions.

As baseball's highest paid player, Gehrig received $39,000 last year, when he had one of his poorest seasons. When the new Yankee contracts were put in the mails last Saturday it was reported the big first-sacker had been asked to take a $9,000 cut.

Last night he called at the home of Edward C. Barrow, newly elected president of the club, and the two came to what Barrow called "a compromise agreement." He added that Lou "appeared satisfied."

Early Agreement

It is the first time in three years that Gehrig agreed to terms before the Yankees went into spring training quarters at St. Petersburg, Fla. In 1937, and again in 1938, his negotiations with the late Col. Jacob Ruppert, the Yankee owner, were carried on into the middle of March.

Gehrig's willingness to sign this year undoubtedly was caused by his showing last year. Lou hit only .295, the first time in his career as a regular that he has dropped below .300, and early in the season was so ineffective he was dropped from fourth to sixth place in the battting order.

Gehrig broke into the Yankee line-up as a pinch-hitter on June 1, 1925, replaced Wally Pipp on first base the next day and has been there ever since. He and Mrs. Gehrig are planning to drive to Florida next month. He wants to do some fishing along the way, and will report at St. Petersburg with the first squad about February 27.

"My consecutive-game streak? Sure, I'll keep plugging at it. The only way they're going to get me off first base is when the boss decides I'm not doing my work properly. Not that I'm ever conscious of being under a strain by extending that streak, but I'm sort of proud of it and that's the only way they'll ever get me to break it."

This Morning

POVICH

"Long-Shot Meade," they used to call him back in the early thirties when he was just beginning to insinuate himself among the select riders of the turf. Col. E. R. Bradley was the first big stable owner to recognize the talents of the muscular little fellow. After watching Meade bring Hotcake, a 50-to-1 shot home first at Laurel after trailing the field, Col. Bradley sent his stable boss down to the jockey room to sign the boy to a contract.

He isn't Long-Shot Meade any more. When a stable puts Meade on a horse, it figures on accepting a 50 per cent cut in the odds. He's the darling of the fans at the Florida tracks, and folks have have been getting moderately rich playing his mounts. He's averaged more than two winners a day. He has three triples to his credit at Hialeah, and the other day he had a 1.000 average, bringing home four of his mounts.

Yesterday, at Hialeah, the magic of Meade's name as a rider was strikingly illustrated. He had the mount on a steed named Fen in the fifth race. The New York Telegraph, Bible of race dopesters, handicapped Feng as the eleventh choice in the 12-horse field. In four previous races, Feng has finished, respectively: sixth, beaten by six lengths; sixth beaten by nine lengths; tenth, beaten by 13 lengths, and eighth, beaten by ten lengths. Yet Meade won with him, and because Meade was up, Feng was a mere 3-to-1 shot, paying $8.20 in the mutuels.

Had Pick of Mounts

The reason for Meade's phenomenal success in his come-back is not difficult to understand. From the moment he illustrated that his two-year layoff had not affected his riding skill, he became a favorite of both fans and stable owners. As a successful jockey, he was able to pick his mounts. He could choose the horses he figured to have a chance to win with. It is always thus among the jockeys. The top riders get the best mounts and thus win the most races.

The last measure of tribute came Meade's way the other day when Charles F. Howard, owner of Seabiscuit, made overtures to the lad to ride Seabiscuit in the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap. Meade refused to leave Florida, a refusal which Walter Haight explains quite logically.

Haight points out that Meade is, paradoxically, indebted to Florida, the State which originally banished him from the track for life. That happened two years ago when, you recall, Meade was discovered betting on horses in races in which he also was riding. Boiled down, Meade's sin was betting against the horse he was riding. That is a high crime in racing and Meade was condemned and exiled.

Eyes N. Y. Racing

Save for the intercession of Col. Bradley, who could pull strings in Florida, Meade may never have returned to racing. But once reinstated, Meade promptly began to make good. He has been riding with such brilliancy, that he has become a gate attraction. If he were to leave Florida and accept the Seabiscuit mount it would be rank ingratitude to the Florida people who gave him another chance. Meade's presence at Santa Anita would be a slap at the Widener Handicap, Florida's No. 1 race of the year, which is scheduled on the same day as the coast classic. If the Santa Anita were able to lure Meade, California would have much to crow about at the expense of Florida.

It was sound logic, also, for Meade to turn down the Santa Anita offer, as Mr. Haight points out. As yet, Meade has not been reinstated by the New York tracks which have intimated that they might not follow Florida's lead. It is important to Meade that he be reinstated in New York. It is there—at Belmont and Saratoga that the richest stakes of summer racing are held. A winning rider's percentage of those stakes is tremendous. Meade, naturally, would like to ride in New York. To do that he must remain in the good graces of the Florida commission, which is closer to the New York racing bosses than the California commission. Thus he turned down the Santa Anita bid.

Those Santa Anita Odds

Speaking of Santa Anita, two large winter book operators in St. Louis, who handle most of the Nation's future booking, have presented their latest odds on the $100,000 race. There is some discrepancy, however. Mr. Charles Burke, who has taken over the booking business of the late Tom Kearney, quotes Seabiscuit as the favorite at 2 to 1. Mr. James J. Carroll offers 3 to 1 on Seabiscuit.

Burke, however, notifies his prospective customers that Dauber, second choice in the winter books, is a doubtful started. That is important and is the reason, of course, why his odds on Seabiscuit are lower than Carroll's. Future book betting is on a pay-or-play basis and backers of a horse that is scratched get no return of their original bet. If Dauber is, indeed, out of the race, Seabiscuit's odds are naturally lower.

Future book betting is, on the surface, attractive to fans. Half of the hundred nominations for the Santa Anita are quoted at better than 100 to 1. But of course only 15 per cent of the entires figure to go to the post. Bets will be made on horses that won't even get out of the barn on the day of the race. Folks won't even get a run for much of their money. And future books create a strong temptation for owners and trainers. It may be worth their while to accept a sum from the bookies and scratch their horse if he is played too heavily in the future books. Which leaves the public holding the well-known sack.

Great Second-Half Rally Fails, Colonials Lose to Army Five, 50-41

Game Comeback Fails To Overcome Army's 34-21 Advantage; Brinker Cadet Star

Special to The Washington Post

West Point, N. Y., Jan. 26.—Despite a great second-half comeback in which Capt. Bob Faris scored seven baskets almost in succession, George Washington's touring basketball forces were defeated by a strong Army team here today by a 50-41 score.

The Colonials went into the second half trailing by 21-34 and although they completely outplayed and outscored the Cadets the rest of the way, they never were able to reduce the deficit to less than eight points.

With eight minutes remaining of play, George Washington pulled up to 34-42 but Army behind the fine shooting of its captain and ace, Walter Brinker, immediately launched a counterattack which put the game beyond the Colonials' reach.

The Colonials seemed unable to defend against Army's fast-breaking offense in the first half and the Cadets looked by far the superior team as Brinker and McDavid pierced the G. W. defense time and again.

Government 'Y' Game to Standards

Stretching their unbroken winning streak to eight games, the fast-stepping Bureau of Standards basketers increased their lead in the Government-Y. M. C. A. League last night by defeating Library of Congress in a rough but thrilling game on the Central "Y" court. The score was 33 to 24.

In other games, Patent Office nosed out Social Security, 26 to 24; Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce trounced Public Health Service, 34 to 16; State Department turned back Farm Credit, 27 to 18, and G. A. O. eked out a 23 to 22 decision over National Archives.

The Silver Spring five led 13-9 at the first quarter, but Mount Rainier rallied and assumed a 21-17 advantage at half time. The third quarter saw the Blair five pull to within a point of the hosts at 26-25.

ready for a fight instead of having finished one.

"I got a new system," he announced. "Knock 'em out quick—in the first round."

In his last defense Louis did the same to Max Schmeling.

"No I couldn't feel sorry for John Henry even though we are friends. I had a job to do and got it over as quick as possible.

"I had no intention of carrying him, as some persons thought. I went in there intending to score a knockout.

"I guess that first right hand to the head started him going. He didn't hit me at all.

"And you can put that John Henry down in your book as one of the gamest guys I ever fought. I couldn't believe my eyes when he got up twice and tried to come off the canvas again."

Louis will leave for Chicago tomorrow to referee some amateur fights. His co-managers, Julian Black and John Roxborough, said they want him to fight this spring.

Back in one of the ringside seats a pudgy little man scratched his head at the finish and looked at Louis with eyes that seemed filled with awe.

Enrollment of 65 Features Greenskeepers 'Short Course'

Five States and District Are Represetned In First Affair of Kind in This Section

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

The first short course of the mid-Atlantic Association of Greenskeepers convened yesterday at Maryland University with 65 enrolling in the three-day affair, more than twice the number expected by the sponsors of the plan, Richard Watson, Chevy Chase, and J. W. Leverton, White Flint.

Not only greenskeepers from five States and the District attended the eight-hour session but representatives of cemeteries, nurseries and the Baltimore Stadium, all interested in the maintenance of fine turf, were present.

The courses, now features of colleges throughout the country including Rutgers, Penn State, Ohio State, Massachusetts State, Wisconsin and Rhode Island, are presented for the technical and scientific knowledge of the greenskeepers of today, in co-operation with the United States Golf Association. Dr. John Montieth, of the Greens section of the latter body, is scheduled for three talks at the present convention.

First in This Area

The present session is the first in this section, the nearest having been Penn State. Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the host school, promised that the event would be an annual affair, after seeing the turnout, composed largely of Washington and Baltimore members of the local association.

Leverton and Watson approached Dr. Ernest J. Cory, of Maryland, with the proposition some time ago. The trio went ahead with the plans, expecting a possible attendance of 30, but were overjoyed at the 65 that registered preceding the morning session.

The entire group will attend lectures and demonstrations by prominent entomologists and agriculturists today and tomorrow and the meeting will be concluded with a dinner Friday night at Columbia Country Club, host club of O. B. Fitts, president of the local association.

Out-of-Town Speakers

Yesterday's principal out-of-town speakers were Dr. J. S. Houser, prominent entomologist from Wooster, Ohio, whose topic was ants, chinchbugs, cutworms, etc., and Dr. O. J. Noer, of the Milwaukee Sewerage Commission, who spoke on "Factors Affecting Turf Injuries."

Dr. Noer had slides illustrating the extent of last summer's tidal wave and hurricane to New England courses, that will take years to recover from the water left standing on the courses for weeks, and the salt and other chemicals that were left on the greens that rotted the grass.

His talk also touched on subject familiar to golfers: too much water on greens in the summertime, just to make the balls stick where they light. Dr. Noer said to water them normally and let the approach shots bounce.

Profs. R. P. Thomas, J. E. Metzger and F. S. Holmes, of the University of Maryland, also addressed the initial session.

Dr. John Monteith, authority on the problems of the greenskeepers, from the Arlington Experimental Station, will occupy much of the next two days with turf watering, turf diseases and new developments in turf culture.

The more or less preliminary discussions of the first meeting will graduate into more advanced study at next year's short course, and so on in succeeding years, that should lead to the betterment of local playing conditions, and to the elimination of pests that hinder the growth of the various grasses and bents.

The local and most prominent greenkeepers attending included Roy Athey, Kenwood; O. B. Fitts, Columbia; Tom Fisher, Burning Tree; R. V. King, Beaver Dam; J. W. Leverton, White Flint; L. A. Shaw and C. J. McCarthy, Army and Navy; John M. Smith, Argyle; P. H. Pratt, Georgetown Prep; Richard Watson, Chevy Chase; Tommy Ryan, Belle Haven; A. E. Pammel, Soldiers Home; James O'Neill Indian Spring.

den and has never failed to attract a $100,000 house.

The outcome of the tilt was just as was expected by most of the fight-wise ringsiders. Louis not only entered the ring a 1 to 10 favorite, but was held as high as 1 to 5 to knock his man kicking. So great was the confidence in him that his managers and Promoter Mike Jacobs already have been talking about his program for the rest of the year.

As matters now stand, it is likely he will meet Bob Pastor, who once went 10 rounds with him—before he was champion—probably in March. After that, possibly in June, he may meet Tony Galento, the Newark puncher, who was on hand tonight and who shouted all over the ringside that he could "lick both dose bums."

Louis came out of the fight absolutely unmarked. John Henry's only memento was a swollen mouth, but it was plenty. His upper lip was puffed up as though covering a wad of tobacco.

The fight was the fortieth since Louis turned professional back in 1934, and marked the thirty-fourth time his "victim" has failed to go the route. Since he won the title with an eight-round knockout of Braddock on June 22, 1937, his five opponents have lasted less than 25 rounds—and one of these, Tommy Farr, went the full 15 in his first defense. Natie Mann was polished off in the third round; Harry Thomas, in the fifth, and Schmeling in a big hurry.

For Lewis it was the 100th fight of a career dating back to 1931, and marked the first time he has ever been kayoed.

Tony Musto, 202½, Chicago, outpointed Freddie Fiducci, 190¼, Newark, N. J., in a six-rounder put on after the title go.

Some line on the windup might be drawn from the opener 4-rounder, in which Jim Howell, of New York, a pudgy 220½-pound Negro from Louis' camp outpointed Bob Smith, 210½, Detroit Negro, who acted as training spar-mate for John Henry.

The crowd came to life with noisy applause for a fine boxing exhibition in the second bout, in which Eddie Booker, 147, of San Francisco, and Holman Williams, 146, Chcago, went six sessions to a draw in another all-Negro contest.

Woodward School Will Swim Today

The annual Woodward School swimming meet will be held today in the Central Y. W. C. A. boy's pool, E. Holt Neese, junior "Y" swimming director who is in charge of the program, announced yesterday. Starting time is 3 o'clock.

The meet is open to both junior and senior swimmers, and gold, silver and bronze medals will be awarded to the winners of each event. Junior swimmers must be between the ages of nine and 14 years, while seniors may not be less than 14 nor more than 18 years of age.

Deyhoe, Stuart Enter Eastern Skeet Shoot

George Deyhoe, outstanding skeet expert of the District, and R. E. Stuart, Alexandria, have entered the fifth annual Eastern two-man championship at Loantaka Skeet Club, near Morristown, N. J., January 28 and 29.

One of the strongest fields in the history of the event will compete, including several State champions. Deyhoe, one of the best known shots in the South, will be among the favored participants.

Bureau of Printing Forms Rifle Club

A pistol and rifle club has been organized at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. It is to be known as the BEPRA Pistol and Rifle Club.

The following officers have been elected for the year 1939: President, Matthew D. Sample; vice president, Joe Ray Carter; executive officer, Leo Routhier; secretary, Richard F. Jacob; treasurer, Bob Woodling.

The club expects to be able to offer stiff opposition to all foes since many of its members are former ex-servicemen and others who have had considerable experience in the use of firearms.

The BEPRA Club would like to hear from teams wishing matches.

Little Hoyas Upset Central By 15-14 Score

Georgetown Prep Five Serves Warning to Catholic Loop Foes

The Little Hoyas of Georgetown Prep scored one of the scholastic season's biggest upsets yesterday, nipping Central High School, 15 to 14 in the Prep gym. Capt. Lou Wimsatt led the attack for the winners, finding the cords for 10 points and playing an outstanding floor game. By virtue of their win, Ed Hargaden's boys served notice to other teams in the Catholic Prep School League that they cannot be held too lightly, as evidenced in yesterday's game when they virtually led from start to finish.

The teams played on even terms in the first quarter while using the zone defense, and the period ended with the score at 3-3. Wimsatt opened the scoring for the Garrett Park quint, and Lagos tossed in a pot shot for Central. Coach Jack Ray sent in a new team for Central in the second period, and it abandoned the zone defense for the man-to-man play. The score at half time found Georgetown Prep holding a 1-point margin at 6 to 5.

Ernie Quidley started the scoring for the Blue and White in the third quarter as he dropped in a side shot, but a few seconds later Lou Wimsatt came through with another basket and Ben Decker added a free toss to give the Little Hoyas a 9-7 edge. Ornstein dropped in a foul for Central while Wimsatt added two more baskets for the prepmen and Devine one. The third quarter ended with Georgetown Prep in the lead 15-8.

Central put on a rally in the late stages of the game, and it looked as though the Blue and White might pull the game out of the fire, when Wimsatt, spearhead of the Georgetown Prep team, left the game on four personal fouls. But the Prep team wasn't to be denied, and it put up a gallant battle in stopping the shots of the Mount Pleasant boys. Kligman and Panago scored a basket apiece, and Quidley and Sokol each made a free toss for Central, while Georgetown Prep was held scoreless in the last period.

Turner, Ahearn Plan All-Star Fight Program

Promoters Quickly Scrap Idea to Hold Only Club Fights

The fistic promotorial firm of Ahearn and Turner having found the public pulse lukewarm toward their recently announced policy to ditch "big name" bouts for club affairs, will return with an all-star show this week.

Phil Furr, former District welterweight champion, who had hoped to meet his one-time local rival, Bobby Wilson, now is challenging Wilson's conqueror, Larry Anzelone, of New York. Chris Dundee, Furr's manager, and Jimmy White, who handles Anzelone, are expected to get together this week in an attempt to agree on terms.

Ahearn also is seeking another Lou Gevinson-Pete Galiano match, and there is talk of rematching Buddy Thomas and Vince DePola, who battled to a draw on last week's card.

Another possibility is Steven Mamakos, the local welter and middleweight, who has been going great guns in Baltimore. Phil Furr wants the Golden Greek.

Heurich Pros Bow At Troy, 37-29

Troy, N. Y., Jan. 25.—In a roughly played American Basketball League game, Troy Haymakers tonight avenged a recent defeat by turning back Heurich Brewers, of Washington, D. C., here, 37 to 29. Trailing at the end of the second period, 30 to 18, Heurich Brewers rallied sufficiently to outscore the home team in the final third, 11 to 7.

Heurich Brewers protested vigorously the roughnig up of their scoring ace, Mickey Schonfeld, but to no avail. Schonfeld, in th interim, scored eight points. Pen Goldfadden, big Heurich center, was high point scorer for the victors with nine points.

This marked the third victory for Troy in four starts against the invaders.

Armor Bearer Triumphs in Thrilling Three-Nose Hialeah Finish

Meade Adds 3 Winners To Record

Star Rider Downed By Arcaro, However, In Card's Feature; Ida Rodgers Wins

By the Associated Press.

Hialeah Park, Fla., Jan. 25.—Although Eddie Arcaro is running a pretty poor second to the sensational Don Meade in the local jockey standing, the long-faced Newport, Ky., Italian demonstrated in the grade "B" handicap here today that he is second to no rider when it comes to putting up a powerful finish. Mrs. Payne Whitney's crack pilot had the leg up on Armor Bearer in the 6½-furlong feature and only because of one of his incomparable hand rides in the final drive did the Greentree gelding make good by a nose.

Fanfare Farms' Denade and Mrs. W. Plunket Stewart's Milk Punch, the latter favorite under Don Meade, finished second and third as named, the three horses winding up an inch or so apart. Milk Punch apparently had the race won a few strides from the finish but Arcaro's remarkable driving on Armor Bearer, which battled through between the other two, snatched victory from defeat. Even Meade could not match his chief rival's exceptional finish in the saddle.

Insco Juvenile Wins

Armor Bearer, paying $9.80, ran the distance in 1:17 1-5. This event was the best of the graded handicaps that feature each Wednesday card.

The victory was Arcaro's second of the day. Meade was shooting for a triple and got it by riding Green Melon in the seventh race. Meade now has 27 winners.

For the second day in a row, a juvenile carrying the silks of Herbert M. Woolf's Woolford Farm accounted for the opening event. Ida Rogers, a winner in her recent debut, repeated in the role of a $3.50 for two choice. The filly, aided by having the wind with her, whirled the distance in the exceptionally fast time of 0:33 2-5 and registered by a length and a half.

Making his first appearance of the winter, Searover II, piloted by the unfashionable Apprentice M. Quintero, shot up on the outside to emerge victorious in the blanket finish of the second contest.

Meade Takes Another

Jock's Betsy, with the almost unbeatable Don Meade on her back, made it three straight triumphs when she came along in time to nose out Royal Pam for the third purse. Spin On was third, a half-length behind.

Eddie Arcaro had an inning in the fourth event, first of the three graded handicaps of 6½ furlongs on the program. The second leading pilot of the meeting drove Blind Pig, a $7.20 for $2 shot, to a half-length success. Gayset was second by a like margin, while Don Meade's mount, the favored Mansco, was third in the field of Grade "C" horses after breaking last. Gayset raced Candy Prince into the ground and appeared a winner until Blind Pig spurted from third position entering the stretch.

Feng, which had displayed little to recommend him under a pair of apprentice boys, showed a new lease on life with Don Meade handling the reins in the fifth event, a Grade "C" affair. The gelding was a real "good thing," being backed down to the unnatural odds of $8.20 for $2.

It was an exciting race all the way, with the three placed horses vieing for command throughout the running. Milk Punch pulled away inside the last furlong, but despite his game finish, he could not stave off an undeniable challenge. Denade was on the outside in the camera wind-up. He barely nipped Milk Punch for the place.

Practicing a D'Artagnan at Powell Junior High

At The Post

Hialeah Park, Jan. 25.

Dear Al:

Carlisia, the Bomar Stable's winner of the $5,000 added Hialeah Stakes, came out of that test in a very lame condition, according to Trainer H. Emmet Potts. Potts is hopeful that the ailment will be of short duration. The son of Jean Valjean and Alice Blue Gown, undefeated in two starts here, will be a starter in the $20,000 added Flamingo Stakes on February 25 at Hialeah, if he responds to treatment. Carlisia, a 3-year-old gray gelding, takes his name from the picturesque Miami Beach winter home of C. B. Bohn, Villa Carlisia. Carlisia, gifted with tremendous speed, did not start as a 2-year-old. He was purchased by the Bomar Stable as a yearling for $8,000 from J. O. Keene, the breeder. The Glen Riddle Farm's Flamingo candidate, Get Off, will be named for the $50,000 Kentucky Derby on May 6, according to Trainer George Conway. The latter plans to ride Wayne D. Wright on the 3-year-old son of American Flag and On Her Toes. The colt at present is being pointed for the $20,000 added Flamingo Stakes. The only injury suffered by Jockey Don Meade last Saturday when tossed off his mount, Petit Jean, at the post, was a black eye. Col. Matt Winn, "Father of the Kentucky Derby," is a visitor at Hialeah Park. Winn plans to remain for a number of days. His first aim is to talk up the Kentucky Derby, and his secondary ambition is to surround himself with Florida's famous sun tan. Many of Hialeah's leading 3-year-olds will be among the Kentucky Derby nominees. Hialeah produced last year's "Darby" hero in Lawrin, which previously had annexed the Flamingo stakes. Greg Johnson is in receipt of stall application blanks for Bowie's spring meeting which opens April 1. He is distributing them to Hialeah horsemen in the interests of General Manager Joseph B. Boyles. Hialeah Park's new tennis court, constructed primarily for use of jockeys as part of their weight-reducing equipment, will be dedicated officially soon. The court, said to be the finest ever built in Florida, already is in use. Several nationally known players will be invited by Joseph E. Widener, president of the Miami Jockey Club, to take part in the dedication ceremonies.

Clocker Mike's parlay blew today and he dropped $12, bringing the bankroll down to $353.30. Tomorrow he will bet $10 to win and $10 third on Petit Jean.

BILL.

First race—Inscolad, another of those promising Insco juveniles, probably needed that last for education purposes. This may be the right spot for him, and I'm going to string along. Unico has worked well and could surprise. Marogay was close last out and is dangerous.

Second race—Fairy Vale breaks off the rail, and Peters may make every post a winning one in this maiden field. Coronado has been close, but has disappointed many times. Remus-Gina for the show end.

Third race—Lady Orchid won for us at good odds last out, and, with Meade up, may make it two in a row. Blue Grotto is good now and figures to be a keen factor. Distractible for the minor award.

Fourth race—Inviting gets in this with light weight, and has been improving. Nash should give us a good ride, and I'm going to take my chances. First Entry is at tops and appears capable of making plenty of trouble. Rushaway barely missed last out.

Fifth race—Lassator drops down a bit and gets a moderate weight assignment. William Palmer, a recent winner, should be close in the final stages. Pordina changes riders, but is fit and ready.

Sixth race—Pause turned in a poor effort for us last out. Meade has been named as the overnight rider for this, and I'm going to try to root him home. Easy Mon probably will draw the bulk of the mutuel play. Pit Terrier for the show end.

Seventh race—Petit Jean tossed Meade in that last start, and, if the team remains intact today, we may see this one in the winner's circle. Peedeeque has taken a new lease on life. Glisten is a possible surprise.

Eighth race—San Antioca gets the best of the weights for the finale, and I'm going to string along. Seed and Veiled Lady for the place and show.

Best bet—Lassator.

Powell Has Modern Plan Of Athletics

Boys Progress in Sports and Studies

The school which supplies Central High with some of its finest athletes, Powell Junior High, takes is sports in small and progressive doses. That is, the classes are small, divided into even smaller sections for the purpose of teaching game fundamentals, and as the embryonic athlete advances in scholastic standing he is given a wider variation of sports from which to choose.

F. Henry Strayer, former sports figure with George Washington's Colonials and director of boys athletics at Powell, has modern ideas about training boys. Seventh and eighth grade students are limited to basketball, volleyball and more or less group games, but ninth graders get a taste of such exclusive pastimes as fencing and badminton.

At the moment, Powell like most of the junior schools is somewhat limited in equipment, but the lads enjoy the games with the facilities at hand. Strayer has been forced to furnish all the racquets, birds, etc. necessary for badminton, a sport he learned from the District champion, Max Farrington, but he considers it worth the expense.

Fencing, a difficult thing to master under any circumstances, is one of the most popular sports among the ninth graders. Their parries and thrusts lack considerable in polish but nothing in violence. Several boys are rounding into fairly good foil-wielders.

A's Boast Biggest Lights in World

Philadelphia, Jan. 25 (AP).—E. B. Karns, Westinghouse engineer, said today that the Athletics will have the "brightest flood-lighted stadium in the world" for the 1939 baseball season.

Karns said the 780 lights, with 2,000,000,000-beam candlepower, would be sufficient to light up a highway between Cleveland and Philadelphia.

The player who bobbles a grounder won't be able to blame it on poor visibility, Karns said 20-inch spun aluminum reflectors would provide ten times better light than the average home newspaper reader enjoys.

Kampouris in Fold

New York, Jan. 25 (AP).—Alex Kampouris, the New York Giants' "second base insurance," has sent in his signed contract. The polo grounders are counting upon Burgess Whitehead to return after a year's leave of absence to hold down the middle sack, but if Whitehead fails to make a comeback they will have to fall back on Kampouris, who hit only .249 last season.

Golden Terror And Nagurski Clash Tonight

Both Risk Lengthy Winning Streaks In Arena Match

The local winning streaks of the colorful Golden Terror and Bronko Nagurski, of Minnesota football fame, will clash tonight at Turner's Arena in the feature of the weekly wrestling show.

Nagurski, former world's heavyweight champion, is undefeated here in seven appearances while the Terror has been having his own way of late, winning seven out of eight matches. His only defeat was a disqualification in a match with another grid great, Joe Savoldi.

The match is important to both as Nagurski is attempting to work up to another bout with Londos while the Terror is anxious to retain his local drawing ability, as a winner.

Bronko has promised to do what Chief Chewaki, Karl Davis and Jules Strongbow promised, but failed, to unmask the Terror.

Tommy O'Toole, Irish favorite, meets Pete Peterson, Los Angeles, in the bout before the final, while other prelims include Wild Man Zim vs. Casey Berger, Red Ryan opposing Dr. Len Hall, and Nick Campofreda, who also boasts of football fame at Western Maryland, grappling with Dutch Schultz.

The first bout will start at 8:30.

4 Million Visitors Expected Here on Way to N. Y. Fair

"From 3,000,000 to 5,000,000 visitors will be in Washington this year on their way to or from New York World's Fair," said Curtis Hodges speaking yesterday before the junior executives of Woodward & Lothrop. Hodges is director in charge of promotion of the Greater National Capital committee of the Washington Board of Trade.

"Judging from the estimates of New York World's Fair attendance, and the inquiries we are now receiving the figure I quote," said Hodges, seems conservative enough. We are even at this early date getting letters almost every day from groups and individuals in the South and West who indicate they expect to visit the New York World's Fair and Washington on the same trip. The World's Fair should create much additional business for Washington, and I think would justify special advertising to reach the new class of visitors.

Hodges said that after several conferences with Edgar Morris, his general chairman, and his promotion committee, Lawrence Williams, chairman, Joseph D. Kaufman, Arthur May, E. F. Colladay and John Saul, he has decided to start and intensive World's Fair advertising campaign February 1.

Kress, 75, Succeeds Brother, 62, as Chain Store Head

New York, Jan. 25 (AP).—Claude Washington Kress, 62-year-old president of the S. H. Kress & &Co., chain of 234 stores, resigned today. The presidency was immediately assumed by his 75-year-old brother, Samuel Henry Kress, founder of the company and chairman of the board.

Company officials said that C. W. Kress resigned in order to take a "much needed rest" and that probably he would resume his connection with the firm at a later date.

The Kress chain began with a general store at Nanticoke, Pa., in the heart of the anthracite region, in 1887. S. H. Kress was then 24. His brother joined him in the store in 1893. Within a few years, they had a chain of stores selling merchandise at 5, 10 and 25 cents.

U. S. Favorable Trade Balance Makes Big Gain

Export Excess for Last Year Rises To 1,133 Billion

By the Associated Press.

The Commerce Department announced yesterday that American busins men sold $1,133,567,000 more goods abroad than they bought from foreign sources in 1938. Merchandise exports totalled $3,094,095,000 and imports $1,960,528,000. In 1937, exports of $3,349,167,000 were only $265,599,000 in excess of imports.

The Department said that the great rise in the country's export excess came primarily from larger shipments of food products although shipment of airplanes, metal machinery and other armament products also increased.

Although the export total was 8 per cent less than in 1937, the Department said the decline in dollar value of shipments was due entirely to lower prices and that the physical volume of shipments was about the same as in the previous year.

36 Per Cent Drop In Imports

The 36-per cent decline in imports was spread over virtually every type of merchandise, including farm products and other raw materials. In 1937 large quantities of grain and corn were imported because of the drought in the previous year.

Every type of agricultural commodity was sold abroad in larger quantity in 1938 than in 1937 except raw cotton, purchases of which were curtailed last year by Japan, heretofore one of the principal foreign customers.

Exports of wheat last year were the largest since 1930; of corn, the largest since 1922; of tobacco, the most since 1931; and of oranges, the largest in history.

The Department attributed much of the import decline to the business recession in this country, which lessened demand for raw materials. Coffee was the only major import bought last year in larger quantity than in the previous year.

Price Trend Is Lower in Lighter Trading Market Rests After Two Busy Days Bond Dealings Listless, Prices Lower

New York, Jan. 25.—Narrowed fluctuations and volume gave markets a breathing spell today after the excitement of the first two days of the week. On the foreign and domestic financial fronts there was no outstanding alteration in conditions but the first effects of the storm, brought on by the imminent fall of the stronghold of the Spanish loyalists and the prospect of official announcement of Germany's and Italy's plans in Europe and the world appeared to have spent themselves.

Stocks and bonds continued to decline, the foreign exchanges were jittery and commodities were irregular but the movements were restricted as compared with the hectic sessions of the two preceding days. Judged by the composite average, stocks sold off 0.23 point, which is a sizable amount, but the resistance to the selling encouraged the bullish forces to think that a sizable rally would not be surprising from this level.

They feel that the technical position of the market has now been improved by the shaking out of weakly held stock and that the flood of heavy European selling has been accommodated. From the standpoint of the chartists it was also significant that the list managed to hold above its new low. There was in addition a sharp falling off in the volume of trading, which amounted to only 903,300 shares on the big board.

Some Groups Resistant

Public utility, motor and aviation shares were better than the balance of the market and averaged slightly higher. Rails and the equipments were almost equal while the heaviest sufferers were the steels and metals. There was a mild recovery all along the line in the final hour. United States Government bonds were easy, the foreign list was speckled with weak issues and domestic corporate issues were generally lower. In the foreign exchange market, transactions were on a more restricted scale, with the guilder adding 2 points to its recent decline but other currencies firming against the dollar.

Fears of war have been the dominating influence in shaping the trends of financial markets in the last few days but there is a distinct possibility that this influence has run its course, at least until the announcement of Germany's and Italy's plans next Monday. One able Wall Street commentator points out that there has been less public hysteria here in connection with the "crisis" than during the Czech episode.

"Radio commentators," he says, "responsible for more excitement than the press last September, paid little attention to the Spanish happenings and the English defense program in their talks Monday night. As Barcelona falls and it comes near time for Hitler to talk, they will start their wild guessing again."

Wild guessing took its toll of prices for two days this week but there is a gradual return to sanity, and a realization that in this country business is following its normal course on a fairly even keel. Current figures on domestic business do not supply the bullish forces with any ammunition for a demonstration but on the contrary they do not justify a bear market.

Most active stock in today's trading was United States Steel, which closed off 1½ points, the same as Bethlehem. Aviations firmed, the most active being Curtiss-Wright, up ½. Anaconda, Kennecott and nickel were soft in the metal division. The two most active utilities, North American and Consolidated Edison were unchanged for the day.

Bonds Dull and Lower

In an exceptionally quiet market most listed bonds again drifted lower today. There were a few firm spots in the speculative section, due to special developments. The bulk of senior securities closed fractionally lower after a feeble mid-day rally petered out. High-grade issues also were soft, under the leadership of United States Treasury issues. Some of the foreign issues were highly variable in a thin market. Turnover was $5,526,000.

Medium-priced carrier bonds were the most active issues, but even this group was faced by a thin market and some issues fell more than a point on a few transactions. B. & O. bonds improved on the legal moves in the suit for placing that line in receivership. Default rails tended lower. Holding company bonds were soft, but some of the industrial convertibles improved. Local tractions slipped a little lower, and communications were weak. International telephone bonds continued to recede on Spanish developments.

Long-term United States Treasury bonds fell 1-32d to 12-32ds of a point, and levels now are about ½ point under the highs attained last week. Guaranteed bonds of the farm and home corporations were soft. But the new issues of $100,000,000 Housing Authority notes was heavily oversubscribed. Best grade utility, railroad and industrial bonds held generally within smallest fractions of previous figures.

In the foreign section German government bonds looked up a trifle, apparently because of the American protest over the default on Austrian obligations. Japanese bonds showed irregular losses to 5⅛ points. Nor was there much buying interest in Italians. Australian state loans were weak in the British group, but Canadians held well. Scandinavians continued to drift downward. Among Latin-American default bonds, Brazilians, Chileans and Colombians were in demand.

Wheat Reacts After Rise to 3-Weeks Top

Profit-Taking Sets In; Closings Irregular; Corn Prices Steady

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Jan. 25.—After wheat prices had worked upward early today to the best level in three weeks, increased selling that included profit taking erased the gains and gave the market an irregular close.

Substantial buying orders were in evidence at around 70 cents for both May and July contracts throughout the session. This support, credited by most pit traders to dealers removing hedges on sales to mills or for subsidized export, was persistent enough to give prices a firm undertone most of the time. Early in the session the pit was caught bare of sellers, which accounted largely for the ¾ cent run-up of values in the first 15 minutes of trading.

Indication of broadened interest of European importers in the international wheat market in view of unsettled political conditions was a constructive factor. British interests bought more than 2,000,000 bushels of wheat from Australia and Canada as well as some domestic hard winter grain.

Wheat closed ⅛ lower to ⅜ higher than yesterday, May 70@70⅛, July 69⅞@70; corn ¼ off to ⅛ up, May 51¾, July 52¾@52⅞; oats ⅛@⅜ higher; rye ⅛ up; lard 3 to 5 higher.

Cotton Firm; March at 8.44

New York, Jan. 25 (AP).—Inactivity of sellers helped the cotton market to score minor gains today. Active contracts finished 1 to 2 points higher, a little under the best. The trade was slow, reflecting a hesitant attitude on the part of operators because of European unsettlement and mixed views on domestic business prospects.

Foreign interests were reported sellers of new crop positions, but this pressure was cushioned by commission house demand for near months. Contracts were offered sparingly in the late trading.

Pay-as-You-Fly Plan Introduced By Pan American

New York, Jan. 25 (AP).—With the cost of superairliners climbing these days into "big business" figures, Pan American Airways announced today the creation of an equipment trust—the first in the history of aviation—to finance the purchase of new airplanes on a "pay-as-you-fly" basis.

Juan T. Trippe, president of the big international airline, said arrangements have been made for sale of $2,500,000 trust certificates, paying 4 per cent interest and maturing serially, on a semi-annual basis, from January 1, 1940, to January 1, 1944. Pan American's directors also authorized the issuance of $1,000,000 more of the certificates at a later date. Trippe said there would be no public offering of the notes, banks having arranged to take the entire amount.

Uncertainties Check Advance In Steel Trade

Output Off to 52% Below Predictions Scrap Prices Steady

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 25.—Continued uncertainties, "at home and abroad," were regarded today by Iron Age, steel industry publication, as the main reasons the steel business in general has not yet advanced this month to the standard of advance predictions.

The magazine said that it had carefully investigated the steel price situation and had found "no new elements of price weakness, but instead a firming up of quotations that were weak during much of last year.

"Most of the price weakness in steel products," said Iron Age, "is in secondary markets, such as fabricators of structural steel, but these are situations that are a hangover from last year and appear to be in process of correction; possibly they will not entirely disappear until stocks acquired at prices below those now quoted have been liquidated.

"Ingot production has declined 1 point to 52 per cent for the industry as a whole, but the situation is made up of contradictions, gains occurring in some districts and losses elsewhere.

"Although steel business is not coming up to earlier expectations for this month, there has been a slow, consistent gain since the first week of the year, it being estimated by some companies that their aggregate tonnage this month may run as much as 20 per cent ahead of that received in December."

The average steel scrap price was reported unchanged, at $15 a ton.

U. S. Striving To Get 2-Price Plan Working

Would Give Some Consumers More, Others Less for Money

The Department of Agriculture yesterday plunged full force into plans for getting its "two-price system" in motion, still trying to shake the unfortunate tag.

With Milo R. Perkins assuming his new duties as head of the Federal Surplus Commodity Corporation and director of AAA marketing agreements, rumors continued that Jesse W. Tapp, whom he succeeds, had resigned in protest against the "two-price" idea.

Forces being marshaled by the Agricultural Department to get the great food and cotton surplus of the Nation into the market at prices consumers will be eager to pay include marketing and consumer groups, as well as farmers.

May Subsidize Customers

It involves not two prices, but multiple prices for a product—arranged according to gradings, absence or presence of fancy packaging and ability of the customer to pay.

Consumer subsidy will be used, if necessary. Secretary Wallace has declared, "We will subsidize, if we have to," but many department officials hope that will be unnecessary.

They hope marketing and retail groups will agree that it is better to get "less for more than more for very little," and will fall in with the idea that new markets are being opened under the plan.

Quick Transport Vital

Undaunted by failure of the railroads to agree to reduced freight rates in marketing the citrus fruit crop, they think transportation reductions can be secured. Quick and cheap transportation is necessary to the program, if it is to include satisfactory marketing of fruit and vegetable crops.

Through its marketing agreements, the Federal Surplus Commodity Corporation, and the approximately $100,000,000 that comes in unearmarked from import duties, the department has both the money and power to go ahead.

Make Oranges Cheap Here

The FSCC will spend $70,000,000 this fiscal year, as against less than $50,000,000 last, buying up surpluses to put a floor under prices and to provide relief clients with free food and clothing.

The low prices at which Washingtonians can buy oranges is traceable to the FSCC's purchases in that field—purchases that were not made until marketing agreements had been drawn up that stipulated careful gradings and called upon producers to lower prices to increase consumption.

Tub butter now appearing in local groceries at much below the packaged price is also a reflection of the Government plan.

On February 1 the department will send representatives to a meeting in Cleveland of poultry producers, market men and "other groups interested in the present egg market situation." Egg prices are going down. The FSCC in all probability will be asked to make huge purchases for distribution to relief clients.

That will be done, officials say, if "interested" groups agree to permit some eggs to go on the market at lower than the regular price.

N. Y. Milk Plan Is Model

The two-price system used in New York for milk distribution is the plan most often pointed to by the department as a model way to increase consumption.

Consumers come to milk depots, bring their own bottles and get a considerable reduction in price below that paid by customers for front-door delivery.

Consumers getting the reduction, however, have been "certified." The department is evading the "grading of consumers" idea as much as possible in the hope that it will not be specifically necessary.

Oh and Ah! Co-ed Beauty Tells Why R. O. T. C. Has 'It'

When a co-ed "oh's" and "ah's" as the R. O. T. C. troops pass by, she is not being taken in by brass buttons and uniforms, Miss Jeanne Barker, beauty queen from the University of Kentucky, yesterday assured the Women's Patriotic Conference on National Defense.

"She is noticing also the mental and physical uprightness that is the keynote of the R. O. T. C." Miss Barker declared. "Women like to see men move with correct and confident bearing. To watch an awkward freshman develop under R. O. T. C. training is not only an inspiration. It's a miracle."

Miss Barker is R. O. T. C. battalion sponsor at her school and believes military training is excellent preparation for business life.

What a Relief! Missing Sealskin Coat Turns Up

American Legionairres and 450 firemen and policemen breathed a sigh of relief yesterday as the "mystery of the missing sealskin coat" was solved, forestalling any assessment of the Legionairres.

The coat, a $195 garment, was missing at the end of a dance Saturday night sponsored by the Legion for firemen, policemn and their wives. In its place rested a flimsy $10 coat. Yesterday the owners got together and figured out the mistake. The coats are alike in every detail up to the price and quality.

Lie Trails Newsman 53 Years Despite White House Denials

C. A. Hamilton, Nearing 83, Was Accused Wrongfully of Reporting Cleveland's Tiff With Sister

Truth never catches up with a lie, some cynic once said, and Charles A. Hamilton, dean of Washington correspondents, sadly agrees with him.

Hamilton is now approaching his eighty-third year. For 53 of those years, he has been denying that he wrote a "scurrilous" story about a quarrel between President Grover Cleveland and his sister, Rose Elizabeth, in 1885, and that he was, as a consequence, barred from the White House.

"Story Persists"

Notwithstanding his denials, however, the story persists. It bobbed up again last week on the occasion of the annual Old-Timers' annual dinner in Charlie's honor.

"What happened," said Charlie last night, "was this: Cleveland and his sister did have a quarrel, and she left the White House and went to New York. The Rev. Byron Sunderland, a Presbyterian minister and their pastor, tried to patch it up, but without success.

"Cleveland's secretary, Dan Lamont, went to New York, persuaded Miss Cleveland to come back, and she continued as chatelaine of the White House. This, of course, was before Cleveland's marriage.

"A few days later, a local newspaper, the Sunday Capital, published by Edmund Hudson, printed an item under the heading "Sub Rosa," saying that two newspapermen had been barred from the White House for printing a story about the quarrel. Then the New York World printed a story saying that the two men were Julius Truesdale and myself. At that time I was representing the Buffalo Express.

"I went to Dan Lamont at the White House, told him what had happened, and he issued a statement denying that I had anything to do with the story and adding that I was always welcome at the White House."

"Pretty Hardy"

That's that. Charlie hopes it will nail the lie, but he is none too sure. A canard that persists for 53 years, he feels, must be pretty hardy.

In 1937, on the occasion of Charlie's eighty-first birthday, President Roosevelt wrote him a letter saying:

"I hope your journey becomes increasingly happy as you go your debonair way toward the Gay Nineties."

Charlie hopes so, too, and he feels that his chances would be greater if that yarn about him and Cleveland would stay buried.

House Judiciary Committee Gets Perkins Charges

The House Judiciary Committee yesterday took under consideration in executive meeting the impeachment resolution brought Tuesday against Secretary of Labor Perkins by Representative Thomas (Republican), of New Jersey.

After examining part of the 45-page document the committee recessed until today. Chairman Sumners, of Texas, gave no indication whether hearings would be held.

A Republican member of the committee said he thought hearings might begin next week. A Democratic Congressional leader observed that "we had the votes to table the bill, but we felt that hearings would give Miss Perkins an opportunity to sweep away publicly the silly charges that have been brought against her."

11 Girls Remain in Marathon Stocking Test at Hood College

By the Associated Press.

Frederick, Md., Jan. 25.—The "runless marathon" test of silk stockings by Hood College students neared an end tonight with 11 marthoners having feet which poked through stocking heels and toes.

"They're coming in fast now and the end is in sight," said one authority whose expense accounts sent home generally include several pairs of silks chiffon hose at $1 per pair.

Since Friday, January 13, 23 women instructors and students in the textile consumption course have worn the same stockings (washed every night, of course) to test the wearing qualities of several brands. The hosiery is removed only for gym classes, sleeping and bathing.

Runs (or ladders if your're from new and old England) began developing soon after the third day. Students who dropped from the marathon recorded low mileages on pedometers slung around ankle, kneecap and neck before the runs appeared or toes wiggled through the silk.

One student obtained only 10 miles on her pair. Others obtained as high as 40 and three-quarter miles. One experimenter, without a pedometer, recorded 93 hours of wear before a snag appeared.

A dance last Saturday night proved fatal to several pairs and reduced resistance in most of the others.

The scientific test was made to determine the relationship of gauge, thread and yarn twist to the durability of stockings, particularly under college conditions—as distinguished from wear given by waitresses, housekeepers and salesgirles.

Local merchants supplied the four brands of hoisery used. Since the test is scientific and not intended to boost the brand which can take punishment longest, college authorities will not disclose the marathon winner—but news travels fast on the campus.

Leader Needed By Democracy, Says Bruening

Former Chancellor Of Germany Talks In Charlottesville

By the Associated Press.

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 25.—Democracy's only salvation in the world of today lies in "right leader" and the maintenance of high "ethical conceptions based upon religious principles," Heinrich Bruening, former chancellor of Germany, told a University of Virginia audience tonight.

The Harvard faculty member, who lost out in the rise of fascism in Germany, said in the last of three lectures that "democracy will only be saved if it becomes conscious again of its proper functions and how strong forces of compromise and mediation remain in a nation. Democracy must spring from common sense and from strong religious background.

"Democracy now needs more than any other form of government right leaders, prepared to sacrifice personal ambitions and passing brilliant successes for the sake of saving its ideals and institutions for the future.

"The fate of democracy," he continued, "depends upon the training of an aristocracy of leaders coming from all ranks of society and having influence in all groups and parties. Their leadership must be based on moral qualifications. It is their task to save or create an atmosphere of mediation and modernation in a nation which also will strengthen it to overcome its most difficult hours."

Dr. Bruening said that, in addition to a religious and moral revival, democracies would have to find safeguards against the stampeding of leaders by people who follow emotions or extremist tendencies.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

WORD of good things spreads rapidly. Some time ago, this column mentioned that the Postoffice Department had bought a beautiful truck and would send it on a wide itinerary of the United States to acquaint school children, college students and the public generally with the good works of the department. The truck, it was stated, would travel the northern regions in summer and gypsy through the southern areas in winter. This was called an ideal employment. The result: More than 75 persons have applied for jobs on the truck. The personnel will soon be announced.

FROM the same quarter comes word that J. Martin Scranage will retire from his position of Assistant Superintendent, Division of Postmasters. And theron hangs an interesting career on which the curtain will fall to the regrets of thousands of Postoffice Department employes. It is a career that brings up the times when Josephus Daniels, now Ambasador to Mexico, was Chief Clerk in the Interior Department and of Grover Cleveland as President.

Thumbnail biography: Scranage was born at Boothsville, W. Va., on January 9, 1869; attended the country schools and was graduated from the Fairmont State Normal School. He taught school for three years; entered the Government service, during the Cleveland second administration, in the Interior Department (Geological Survey) on July 16, 1894, as an appointee of William L. Wilson, Congressman from West Virginia. Hoke Smith then was Secretary of the Interior, Mr. Daniels the Chief Clerk. When Congressman Wilson became Postmaster General, Scranage was transferred from Geological Survey to the Postoffice Department, September 26, 1896. He studied law at what then was the Columbian University; was graduated in 1896 with the degree of bachelor of laws and in 1897 received the degree of Master of Laws. He was admitted to the District Bar that year. All told, he has been in the Division of Postmasters for something over 42 years. For the past six years he has been Assistant Superintendent.

Mr. Scranage.

They will give a dinner in his honor at 7:30 p. m. Tuesday at 2400 Sixteenth street northwest. Among the speakers will be W. W. Howes, First Assistant Postmaster General; Vincent C. Burke, Washington Postmaster; Jesse M. Donaldson, Deputy First Assistant Postmaster General; Charles C. Wenrich, Assistant Deputy First Assistant Postmaster General, and Joseph F. Gartland, Assistant Chief Inspector.

NEWS for charwomen: Representative Emmanuel Celler, of New York, has introduced a bill to classify charmen and charwomen in all Government buildings, under whatever jurisdiction they are now placed, and to pay them on the same basis as skilled and unskilled labor in the Government service. Foremen would be paid on a skilled labor basis; head charmen and head charwomen and others on the basis of unskilled labor. The American Federation of Government Employes requested the bill.

NEWS for all: Representative Jennings Randolph, of West Virginia (he is gradually creeping up on Representative Ramspeck as the employe's friend), introduces H. R. 3057 which would substitute a system of automatic promotions for satisfactory service, in place of the present system of efficiency ratings. In these respects, it would amend the Classification Act of 1923.

GOOD-BYES, February 1, in the Commerce Department include Anna M. Clauser, of the Census Bureau, who has worked 34 years, and Herbert B. Brooks, of Standards, who served 30 years . . .

Bob Burns Says—

These Government surveys is interestin' things. Especially the one that says we got 70,000 more "Vanishin' Injuns" today than we had at the turn of the century! Maybe them redskins is a-loadin' up an' a-plottin' to take this country back from us after bit! Anyhow, this news comes at a time when most of us had commenced to think we wouldn't never see what an Injun looked like unless we saw his head on a buffalo nickel.

My great-great-grandfather, Ebenezer Sneezer, was an Injun fighter. He had three horses bow-an'-arrowed out from under him an' was William Tell-ed through the Adam's apple, but he lived to the ripe ole age of 93. An' it finally took one of our first automobiles to git him. "Jes' to think," sez he. "The redskins couldn't git me, but a little tin thing, painted red, skinnin' along on wheels, did the trick! I'm plumb disgusted!" Say, if ole Ebenezer Sneezer could-a lived till now an' read the yearly list of dead an' maimed from auto smashes, he'd of thought his Injun fightin' days was pretty tame! Talk about your "Vanishin' Redskins!" If this sort of thing keeps up, what we should be worryin' about is the "Vanishin' White Race!"

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

A unique bridge match was televised throughout England recently when four British bridge experts attempted to equal the memory feat of blind bridge players playing with blank cards after having seen their dealt hands for about 30 seconds.

Terence Reese, who reported the match for the British Bridge World, said that a half a minute was ample time in which to memorize a 13-card hand but that the trouble lay in remembering the order of the cards as the play progressed "with the knowledge that if you once lose grip recovery may be impossible."

Hand From Contest

The play of one of the hands of the match as described by Mr. Reese, who sat West, follows:

"When the bidding stopped at one no trump we were inclined to think that something had gone amiss, for television hands generally end in a contract of five or more doubled.

"I called out the jack of hearts and laid down one of my blank cards. The proper dummy cards were put down and a small heart played. Simon could not remember whether his fifth heart was the two or three.

Scrambling the Defense

"Finally he announced the three of hearts in a hopeful voice. Konstam immediately claimed a 'foul,' and Hulbert, who was standing in front of the (to us) invisible board with all the cards on it, solemnly informed the viewers that Mr. Simon had made a slight error for which his side would be fined ten points. The two was then substituted and Konstam won with the king. His next play was the club jack. I played the four, and Simon won with the ace.

"He returned the spade jack. I headed queen with king and had nothing better to do than play back the spade two hoping that partner had jack, ten, nine.

"Konstam won the spade and followed with the diamond queen. The most quick-witted play on my part would have been to play low, for if declarer had adoubleton as was probable, he would not be likely to take a second finesse for fear that East was holding up with the king. However, in the circumstances, I was not good enough to make this play unhesitatingly as was necessary and, in fact, I covered with the king, whereupon Konstam let me hold the trick.

"In the end though I knew it was hopeless I played a spade, for the only chance was that if partner could muddle the two and three of hearts he might also have confused the nine and ten of spades. But Konstam won with the nine, cashed the club king and went over to dummy with a diamond.

"Even if the diamonds had not now broken, he was sure of his contract, for only my hand could have four of them, and if that were so, I would still have to concede the last trick to the club ten.

"As it was, the diamonds broke, and Konstam claimed the two long cards and conceded the last two tricks to East."

Bedtime Story

The Wile of the Trapper

By Thornton W. Burgess.

The unsuspecting oft beguile.

Reddy Fox had dined well. Perhaps I should say that he had breakfasted well, for it was early in the morning that he had caught a Hen in the dooryard of the very Man who was trying to trap him, and then had eaten it just back of the barn where he could not be seen from the house. There he had left the telltale feathers. Of course he couldn't take them with him. When he had finished that breakfast he felt like another Fox. Yes, sir; that is the way he felt. He peeked around the corner of the barn. Those silly hens had forgotten their fright. A quick rush, a leap and he had another. This time he leaped a stonewall. Keeping that between him and the house, he made for the woods and reached cover without being seen. His prize was not for himself. No, sir, it was not for himself. It was for Mrs. Reddy.

When later in the morning the trapper returned from visiting his traps, disappointed that he had no Fox, he approached from back of the barn and saw some feathers blowing about. He went over to look at them. One glance was enough to tell him what had happened.

"So!" he exclaimed, and grinned ruefully. "While I am trying my best to catch those Foxes one of them comes and steals one of my Hens. If that Fox could laugh he probably would be laughing this very minute at the thought of how he had gotten even with me. The laugh is on me, I must confess. Well, he laughs best who laughs last. I'll see if I can't make this the cause of your own undoing."

He went to the house and asked his wife if she had seen a Fox around. She said that she hadn't, but that something had frightened the Hens as they were picking up scraps she had thrown out. She had hurried to look out the window and saw nothing to cause fright. Later they had made another great fuss, but apparently it was over nothing. At this the trapper grinned again and his grin was a trifle more rueful than before.

"He'll return," said the trapper to himself. "Having caught a good dinner so easily he will try for another. Success will make him bold. And when he does return I think I'll have that coat of his."

So the trapper next day brought in a couple of his traps that he had set in vain. He studied surroundings carefully to decide which way a Fox would be most likely to approach from the woods. Then with great care he set his traps, handling them with gloves that there might be no telltale scent on them.

"That Fox is likely to come back to the place where he ate that Hen back of the barn," thought the trapper.

So he set two traps there, carefully covering traps and chains. Over one of them he raked some of the feathers. Then he went to the henyard. When the Hens were in the henhouse he fastened the door. The gate of the henyard he left ajar and fastened it so. There was just room for a Fox to enter. In this opening was placed a stick in such a way that an animal seeking to enter would naturally step over it. Buried in the snow just where one stepping over that stick would put a foot in it was another trap.

When all was done there was nothing to arouse suspicion. Everything had been covered by lightly sifting snow over the whole. Nothing could have appeared more innocent.

"That Fox is bound to come back," said the trapper to his wife. "He will find that gate to the henyard ajar. He won't be able to resist the temptation to go inside to see if by chance a way for him to get into the henhouse has been left. Those Foxes have outsmarted me so far, but here is where I will get even with one of them."

He didn't know Reddy and Mrs. Reddy.

Lutherans To Co-ordinate 300 Charities

New Department Wins Approval Of Council Here

Establishment of a co-ordinating department of 300 independent Lutheran welfare agencies in the United States was approved yesterday by the National Lutheran Council, at the opening of its annual sessions at the Ambassador Hotel.

Dr. Clarence E. Krumbholz, of New York, at present chairman of the Board of Social Missions of the United Lutheran Church, is being called to head the new organization, the purpose of which is to establish standards of operation in the social welfare field and to promote co-operative effort.

Meanwhile, all officers were re-elected. They included Dr. Ellis B. Burgess, New York, president; Dr. T. O. Burnvedt, Minneapolis, vice president; Dr. Peter Peterson, Chicago, secretary, and Ernest F. Eilert, New York, treasurer. Now completing his twenty-first year of service, the latter is the only officer having served continuously since the council's formation in 1918.

The council approved a recommendation that Lutheran bodies discontinue relationships with the general council on Army and Navy chaplains of the Federal Council of Churches, and in the future they will be served by the National Lutheran Council.

Discussion among the council commissioners on the present tendency toward militarism and the growing need for an effective chaplaincy brought comment from Dr. Howard M. Snyder, Atonement Lutheran pastor, who said that ". . . . Religion in armed forces since the World War has been put on a dignified basis as it never before was in the history of the United States Army. Best of all, there are God-fearing men in the Army and Navy."

The council also adopted a resolution offering service to CCC boys and considered the advisability of establishing a Lutheran radio station in the East.

Twenty-three leaders representing eight Lutheran bodies attended the sessions. Because of the enforced absence of a commissioner of the Norwegian Lutheran Church, Senator Henrik Shipstead, of Minnesota, served as substitute.

Roanoke, Va., Jan. 25.—The Lutheran Synod of Virginia, in the first full day of its 110th annual convention at St. Mark's Church here today, received reports of its stewardship, missionary and Christian education committees and heard addresses by representatives of the auxiliary organizations and educational institutions.

During the afternoon session, the synod heard addresses by Miss Frances V. Miller, of Shenandoah, synodical young people's field worker, on the Luther League of the synod; Mrs. J. L. Almond, jr., of Roanoke, on the Women's Missionary Society of the synod, of which she is president, and H. C. Ahalt, of Blacksburg, retiring president of the Synodical Brotherhood.

Presenting their reports, coupled with strong appeals for support by the ministers and laymen of the synod, were the Rev. Charles J. Shealy, president of the board of trustees of Southern Theological Seminary in Columbia, S. C.; Dr. Charles J. Smith, president of Roanoke College in Salem, and the Rev. Hugh J. Rhyne, president of Marion College in Marion. All three institutions are supported by the United Lutheran Church in America.

The U. L. C. A. showed a 10 per cent increase in membership last year, the delegates were told by H. Torey Walker, of Philadelphia, treasurer of the churchs board of American missions, and church extension secretary. Walker, addressing the morning session, also reported that the Virginia synod gave a larger proportionate contribution to the anniversary appeal, conducted by the U. L. C. A. last year, than any other synod in the church.

Billion Boost In U. S. Income Held Feasible

Expert Offers Plan; Opposes Income Tax On Federal Employes

Three methods of increasing national income "a billion dollars or more" were outlined yesterday to the Rotary Club of Washington by L. H. Parker, tax expert, who was for many years chief of staff of the Joint Congressional Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation. Parker scouted the value of taxing incomes of Government empolyes and of taxing interest from Government securities.

The means he held most promising were:

Instituting a sales tax.

Encouraging and speeding up business so as to increase substantially the national income.

"Our tax troubles would be over," he promised, "if, instead of a national income of from $60,000,000,000 to $65,000,000,000, we had a national income of $100,000,000,000. Can this be brought about?"

It might, he answered himself, by "new legislation, by revision of legislation, by lack of legislation, and even by tax laws that would encourage instead of discourage business enterprises." He reminded his audience that "nearly one-half of our Federal tax receipts come from income tax" and asked, "what is the use of high rates if there is no net income to tax?"

"Of course," he said, "a good many people believe that tax laws should be for revenue purposes only, but if we can stimulate business by tax measures in order to get more revenue, is not that for revenue purposes?"

Taxation of the salaries of Government employes, Parker said, probably would go no farther than those of employes not engaged in a function essential to operation of the Government. Thus, he indicated, new legislation would be required to reach this income.

Any yield from Government securities, Parker said, would not be available for some years in appreciable quantity.

50 Lose Homes In Conn. Blaze

Bridgeport, Conn., Jan. 25 (U.P.).—Fire swept through the northern outskirts of this city tonight razing a half dozen homes and an ice plant warehouse and leaving more than 50 people homeless.

The fire was brought under control after it had raged over two entire blocks for four hours, with damage estimated at more than $400,000.

$100,000 Fire Hits Car Shops At Mt. Savage

2 Buildings Razed, C. & P. Railroad to Continue Operations

By the Associated Press.

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 25.—A $100,000 fire which swept through the Mount Savage shops of the Cumberland & Pennsylvania Railroad last night will not interfere with operations enough to curtail employment, officials said today.

General Manager William Claus, placing the damage at approximately $100,000, said it was about two-thirds covered by insurance.

But whether the upper and lower car shops, destroyed by the flames, will be replaced could not be determined immediately, Claus reported.

Approximately 75 are employed at the Mount Savage shops, where historians say the first steel rail used by an American railroad was rolled.

The fire was discovered about midnight in the paint shop by Edgar Beaver, who was working on the coal tipple.

Firemen from Cumberland, Frostburg and La Vale joined the Mount Savage volunteers, but the two buildings were destroyed, five freight cars burned and a locomotive was damaged before they could head off the flames.

A high wind threatened for a time to sweep the fire down the valley in which the village rests and through the homes of the workmen who are employed in the shops.

The Cumberland & Pennsylvania was one of the first railroads built in the Nation, and part of the old records destroyed were draftsmen's drawings of some of the first cars and first locomotives.

Records of freight and passenger traffic in the early days were also destroyed, along with some of the documents concerning establishment of the line.

Health Surety Shelved for This Session

Wagner, However, to Push Rest of National Social Program

Senator Robert F. Wagner, New York Democrat, and the Administration have agreed not to push a health insurance program in the present session, but to relegate this controversial issue to a study to be authorized in proposed legislation.

The Senator, who sponsored much of the New Deal social legislation, will introduce a bill next Monday, however, to initiate the rest of the national health program supported by the White House, with Federal appropriations the first year of close to $50,000,000.

Wagner and Administration experts are still considering incorporating in the bill a device to encourage State temporary disability compensation systems which would take the form of insurance.

Medical Men Disagree

Chicago, Jan. 25 (AP).—Conflicting views on the social aspects of medical care were voiced tonight by two leaders in the field of medicine.

Dr. Morris Fishbein, editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association, declared:

"Compulsory sickness insurance must inevitably result in a deterioration of the quality of medical service," and prove a step toward a "Fascistic or a Communistic" system.

Dr. John P. Peters, of Yale University, asserted:

"Some method must be devised by which the great mass of our middle class population may secure medical attention they require without being subjected to indignity."

5-Year-Old Boy Saves 2 Brothers And Sister in Fire

St. Charles, Va., Jan. 25 (U.P.).—Clifford Morris, 5, son of a mine worker, was proclaimed a hero tonight after he rescued his 4-year-old sister, Cora, and two brothers, Bernard, 2, and Jerry, 8 months, from their blazing home.

Ernest Morris, Clifford's father, was away, and Mrs. Morris was at a neighbor's house when she noticed her home was afire. She rushed to the house but was unable to enter because of stifling flames and smoke.

As she started to leave, weeping, her attention was attracted by Clifford as he carried the third child from the blazing house. He already had rescued the other two.

Former Pastors Join Church In Dedication

$30,000 Structure Is New Home of Potomac Heights Congregation

Participating in the "former pastors' night" program of dedication week, Potomac Heights Community members last evening heard the Rev. Milton B. Crist, once their spiritual leader, sound a warning against "moral disintegration and its effect on democracy."

Later, following the program in the auditorium of the new $30,000 structure, parishioners gathered in the social hall for an hour of fellowship.

Mr. Crist, pastor from 1928 to 1930, told a capacity audience that ". . . we in America have a heritage in the privileges of free speech, free education and free religion, but democracy is now faced with a life-and-death struggle."

Other former ministers who spoke were the Rev. L. Barrett Rice (1930-34); the Rev. J. P. Murdock, pastor for nine months, and the Rev. Dr. Oscar J. Randall, who served from 1923 to 1928, and from 1934 until the present.

Other dedication week services include an organ recital tonight by Mrs. Ruth Miller Blackburn, assisted by Harlan Randall, guest soloist, and a quartet; Christian Endeavor rally tomorrow night, with Miss Helen Lyon speaking on the world Endeavor convention at Melbourne, Australia, and a service Sunday, a high light of which will be an address at 8 p. m. by Representative Lyle H. Boren, of Oklahoma.
